CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.)
— "I don't think we have an option of not developing some type of program," said Dr. David Kradel, industry coordinator of the Pa. Egg Quality Assurance Program (PEQAP), on Thursday.

Kradel spoke to about 146 tur-cy producers and agri-industry representatives at the 1995 Pennsylvania/Virginia Turkey Day at Embers Inn in Carlisle.

Kradel spoke about the successful PEQAP program for egg producers. He indicated ways in which some of the methods employed by PEQAP could be translated to a similar quality assurance program for the turkey industry.

The PEQAP program makes use of an extensive hazard analysis critical control points (HACCP) program that began in February 1994 to handle the problems of salmonella enteritidis (SE) in eggs. The PEQAP program is all voluntary for egg producers.

Salmonella is a concern for many poultry producers too as a major public health issue. As a matter of fact, according to Kradel, the National Turkey Federation already has published a sheet listing the best management practices (BMPs) which are essential to a good quality assurance program for turkey producers.

Kradel said that while the U.S. has the safest food in the world at the lowest cost, food safety remains a major issue. There are an estimated 33 million cases of foodborne illness per year with an estimated 9,000 deaths at a cost estimated at $9.4 billion.

But soon, SE could be overtaken by campylobacter (like SE, caused

Game Commission Approves Deer Permits For Farmers

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Crop farmers or those with leased hunting rights on cropland will now be able to issue permits to hunters to harvest crop-damaging antlerless deer during the off-hunting season.

Except for during the summer fawning season and Sundays, antlerless deer may be killed by permit holders from Feb. 1 through Sept. 30.

The approval of the program by the Pennsylvania Game Commission was done without fanfare during its late September meeting. In the spring, tentative approval had been given by the commission to the program.

The basics of the program are that the owner of cropland, or the land-controlling lessee, makes an application to the Game Commission for a deer control permit.

With a deer control permit in hand, the farmer can then issue subpermits to whomever he or she chooses, at a general issue rate of one subpermit per 10 acres of cultivated cropland.

Each subpermit is good for one antlerless deer. There is to be only one subpermit allowed per hunter.

Rubberneck Tour Includes 700 Vehicles

Susan Witten Conaway of Belmont, Ohio participated in the Longhorn hand-feeding segment of the 1995 Rubberneck Tour at Dickinson Cattle Company near Barnesville, Ohio. More than 700 vehicles with eager viewers enjoyed spotted, big horned Longhorns and Ohio rural hospitality.

BARNESVILLE, Ohio—The Belmont County drive-it yourself Rubberneck Tour was held earlier this month on a perfectly beautiful Ohio fall day with record-breaking attendance.

The tour stops included the Dickinson Cattle Company, Gay 90s Mansion, Barbara Barbie Doll Museum, Barnesville B&O Depot, Barnesville Senior Center, Olney Friends School, Rockwell Orchards, Olney Taber Farm and Pryor Auction House.

Items of interest on the tour included Texas Longhorn cattle, Jersey cattle, sheep, an apple orchard, a Christian-Quaker school, a Senior Center, the historic Barnesville Depot, a major Barbie doll collection, and an elaborate 1800s mansion.

The major attendance was measured at Dickinson Cattle Com-

After experiencing another very enjoyable summer show season where I had the opportunity to see numerous excellent animals and some very positive sights, but also a few questionable practices at fairs throughout the commonwealth and north-eastern United States, I felt compelled to initiate this column in Lancaster Farming.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
OCTOBER 11, 1995

Grain and soybean bids traded higher in reaction to this morning's USDA Crop Production and Supply and Demand reports. Wheat steady to 2 cents higher except St. Louis 6 to 8 cents lower. Corn 1 to 6 cents higher. Sorghum 8 to 11 cents higher. Soybeans 6 to 14 cents higher. Tight world wheat stocks and crop concerns due to dry conditions in wheat growing areas, supported wheat bids. Gains were limited in wheat as export demand has slowed considerably this week. Corn and soybean bids extended yesterday's gains on as USDA estimated corn production at 7.54 billion bushels, down 25 percent from the record high 1994 production of 10.1 billion bushels and 4 percent below the September 1 estimate. Reported yields of newly harvested corn have been reported in poor condition with disease noted and too much moisture. Drier conditions and warmer temperatures are what is needed. Soybean production was forecast at 2.19 billion bushels as of October 1, down 4 percent from the September 1 forecast and 13 percent below 1994. The estimate for 1995/96 ending stocks were 220 million bushels, down from the 330 million estimated in September.

OK City Feeder Cattle

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK
OCTOBER 11, 1995

Compared to last Monday: Feeder steers and heifers steady to 2.00 higher. Feeder cattle demand very good for heavy yearlings, moderate for light yearlings. Steer and heifer calves generally steady with moderate demand. Calf flesh on the increase as is typical for fall calf run. Yearling flesh mostly medium, few thin. Weigh-ups on calves and yearlings average to full. Wheat planting thruout the state still only partially completed. Last Monday's state-wide rain put the brakes on drilling for several days. Appreciable early wheat pasture still a major unknown and this taking its toll on the calf market. Slaughter cows and bulls steady to 1.00 higher. Packer demand good after a fairly sluggish start. Weighing conditions mostly a detriment to buyers with many cows showing excess fills. Total of 565 cows and bulls sold with 70 percent to packers. Receipts this week 8,500; last week 8,211; last year 12,561. OCTOBER 16-22, 1995

ALASKA DAY, OCTOBER 18.

FIRE AND ICE

With its smoking volcanoes and icy glaciers, our 49th state is the largest in size. We purchased Alaska from Russia for $7.2 million and increased the area of the U.S. by 20 percent. Its Malaspina glacier complex is bigger than Rhode Island. Mt. McKinley is the highest peak in North America and the Yukon River is one of the longest navigable rivers in the entire world. Even Alaska's animals are big — the killer whales and humpbacks, the walrus, moose, and caribou, the bears and wolves. To protect their eyes from the glare of Alaska's sun and snow, Eskimos wear wooden "sunglasses" with very narrow slits.

Seeing is believing.

— Latin proverb.

TIP OF THE WEEK

To prevent eyeglasses from steaming in cold weather, rub both sides of each lens with soapy fingers, then polish.

COUNTRY ONION PIE

3 pounds onions
3 tablespoons butter
1 pint half & half
3 eggs, beaten
two pastry crusts

Peel and slice the onions. Fry in butter (or bacon fat) until golden. Lightly beat together cream and eggs and add to onions. Pour into pie crust and cover with top crust. Cut slits in top crust and bake at 350° F for 1 hour. (Fried, chopped bacon can be added to the filling if desired.)

Makes 8 servings.

I considered at great length what my purpose could be and should be for this column. The purpose of this column is to provide readers of Lancaster Farming with various perspectives, mine and those of others, that may influence the manner in which we conduct livestock shows, particularly junior livestock shows. Topics will range from ethical considerations, securing a judge, and weight limits, to fitting practices, uniform rules, and technical resources. I will strive to provide balance in both positive and negative commentary on issues, and will graciously welcome responsible comment and ideas for future articles. The 'bottom-line' will be to accentuate the positive, and to mention the negative with hopes of changing it for the better.

Whether we realize it or not, those of us directly and indirectly involved with junior livestock projects have an awesome responsibility! We have instituted programs youth livestock projects, that foster responsibility, care, motivation, competitive spirit, social and life skills, and honesty. But there are a few members of society, both within and without livestock circles, who will ruin these activities for the majority if we allow certain practices to continue, and to be readily accepted as the "norm."

During the last three years, livestock producers have received considerably more unfavorable press than favorable attention from the media. This will probably not change in the near future, as general livestock management practices come under closer scrutiny by American citizens. We owe it to ourselves and to our children to see that youth livestock programs serve future generations in a more positive way than they served us.

To this end, I have reprinted with permission an article entitled, "Learning By Example," written by Larry Mrozinski that was reprinted in Seedstock Edge (August, 1995) by Darrel Anderson, CEO of the National Swine Registry. Larry is a purebred sheep breeder from Minnesota, judges sheep shows nationally, and has served as a contest official at the National Senior College Livestock Judging Contest.

The message is clear. The species terminology is not important. This article clearly defines "the scope and magnitude of some of our responsibilities" to youth and their junior livestock projects

When Tommy was 8 years old, his father registered a lamb born December 24 as being born on January 2. His father said to Tommy, "It's O.K. kids, everybody does it."

When Tommy was 9 years old, his father bred the family's flock of purebred ewes with a ram of another breed and registered the lambs as purebreds. His father said to Tommy, "It's O.K. kid, everybody does it."

When Tommy was 10 years old, his 4-H leader and county agent tagged and weighed newly purchased lambs a month after the ownership deadline. They both said to him, "It's O.K. kid, everybody does it."

When Tommy was 11 years old, his parents bought him a registered ewe lamb to show at a county fair and changed the ear tag to their own flock tag. His parents said, "It's O.K. kid, everybody does it."

When Tommy was 12 years old, his grandparents bought him a show lamb and left it with the breeder who fed and fit the lamb until the day before the county fair. The breeder and his grandparents said, "It's O.K. kid, everybody does it."

When Tommy was 13 years old, his veterinarian issued health papers for sheep he never inspected and that had foot rot and lamb fungus. He said, "It's O.K. kid, everybody does it."

When Tommy was 14 years old, his neighbor used an electric animal prod on his lambs to get them to brace. He told Tommy, "It's O.K. kid, everybody does it."

When Tommy was 15 years old, and after winning the Grand Champion Lamb at the county fair, he saw his Dad having a beer with the judge and paying the judge $200 for making his son's lamb Champion. The judge and his father said, "It's O.K. kid, everybody does it."

When Tommy was 16 years old, his FFA advisor falsified the numbers on Tommy's winning sheep proficiency award entry. His advisor said, "It's O.K. kid, everybody does it."

When Tommy was 17 years old, his uncle used Lasix on his market lamb at the state fair to make it weigh into a lighter class. The uncle told Tommy, "It's O.K. kid, everybody does it."

When Tommy was 18 years old, his older brother pumped the loin of his lamb at a national sheep show. His brother said, "It's O.K. kid, everybody does it."

When Tommy was 19 years old, his entire family was aware of the clenbuterol being given to his market lambs. They told him, "It's O.K. kid, everybody does it."

When Tommy was 20 years old, a friend offered him some cocaine. His friend said, "It's O.K. kid, everybody does it."

When Tommy was arrested later that night for using cocaine and called his family to ask them to bail him out of jail, they told him, "How could you have brought such disgrace to your family, you never learned any of this at home, where did you go wrong?" After hearing of his arrest, Tommy's 4-H leader, FFA advisor, county agent, grandparents, uncle, veterinarian and neighbors were also shocked.

If there is one thing the adult world can't stand, it's a kid that breaks the rules...

"Learning By Example" by Larry Mrozinski

The first step to ensuring the continuation of the variety of positive experiences that have benefited numerous of us previously is to put an end to the practices of a few who would adhere to the aforementioned philosophy.

We all know that, "It's not O.K.!", and, "Not everybody does it!"

But if just one person does it, "It's not O.K.!"

Background Scripture:

Devotional Reading:

Matthew 4:17-22

Last week one evening I watched an episode of "Under Suspicion," a current television series. In this particular episode there was a priest who was suspect in a murder case, largely because, before becoming a priest, he had been convicted of manslaughter.

At one point, the detective asks her superior officer if he believes that people can change and he cynically replies that, in his experience, criminals do not change. At the end the priest is proven innocent and the detective is confronted with the evidence that, here at least, was one person who could and did change—for the better.

This story captured my interest because it is a very timely concern. Lots of people today share the conviction that people don't change for the better. In the Sunday newspaper was an article about a social worker who said that ex-convicts are caught on the horns of a dilemma. When prospective employers ask them whether they have a police record, if they respond truthfully, they are not likely to get the job. If they lie and are found out, they will be dismissed. Yet, if ex-cons are ever to "go straight," they need to be able to get jobs.

THE "BAD GUYS"

The problem is that many of us think that people either cannot change for the good, or are not likely to do so. I will acknowledge that there are many who do not change, but may that not be because our society reinforces their belief that they are condemned to be criminals. If they try to make something of their lives we may refuse to give them the chance to be the better selves that God created them to be.

Perhaps that is the problem right there: maybe we do not believe that God created them to be anything more than what they have been. Lots of people believe that the world can be divided into the "good guys" and the "bad guys" and that both are born to be the way they are.

If that were true, then Paul's conversion on the Damascus road could not have taken place. For, up to that moment, Saul was clearly one of the "bad guys." He had not only been a guilty bystander at the tragic murder of Stephen, he had become the early church's greatest nemesis, "breathing threats and murder against the disciples of the Lord" and zealously dragging bound Christians off to Jerusalem to face persecution.

THE SAME BUT DIFFERENT

We cannot blame the early Christians for being frightened of this man. Instructed by the Lord to go to Saul and heal him, Ananias had good reason to protest: "Lord, I have heard from many about this man, how much evil he has done to the saints in Jerusalem..." (9:13). And, after the converted Saul has become Paul and begins preaching in the synagogues of Damascus, we can understand why the Christians there ask, "Is not this the man who made havoc in Jerusalem of those who called on his (Jesus') name?" (8:21).

The answer to these protests is both "yes" and "no." Yes, this is the same man, but no it is not. Yes, this man was a zealous persecutor of Christians, but he has changed from a persecutor to an apostle. Why? Because the Lord has created him for another purpose. As God said to Ananias, "Go, for he is a chosen instrument of mine to carry my name before the Gentiles and kings and the sons of Israel" (9:15).

Each of us God has created as a chosen instrument, when we permit him to do so, he can change us to accomplish that purpose. The leopard cannot change his spots, but God can!

To Pick Up Farm Show Information

Copies of the premium list for the 1996 Pennsylvania State Farm Show have arrived at your local cooperative extension office.

The premium list provides information on all the classes and competitions at the 1996 show. It has all the rules, entry forms, and closing dates for entries.

Many of the classes have a Nov. 2 closing date while others have Oct. 28, December 2, 15 and Jan. 4-6 closing dates.

In addition, tentative schedule of events is provided.

To Plant Cover Crops

Cover crops have many uses and advantages. Cover crops can help supplement the production of the farm by providing additional feed for livestock in fall, winter or spring as pasture. They may also be harvested as silage in the spring.

Other major advantages of cover crops include protection of soil from erosion during the winter, capturing unused nitrogen in the soil profile, adding organic matter to the soil, and improving soil tilth. Also, cover crops minimize nutrient losses from winter spreading of manure.

Many plants may be used as cover crops, but the most popular are winter grains. Spring oats sown in the fall are an excellent cover crop that does not need to be killed with a pesticide next spring. If farmers have land which will be bare during the winter, they should consider the many advantages that cover crops offer.

To Consider Rotating Alfalfa Fields

Is it time to rotate the alfalfa field to another crop? Now is the time to start making that determination.

Start in the fall by counting the number of plants per square foot. Fields with 4 to 5 plants per square foot should be considered as good potentials for rotation next spring.

However, knowing the number of plants per square foot may not (Turn to Page A31)

CURTAIN SYSTEMS

Lapp's Curtain System

Lapp's insulated curtains can help you make your farm more efficient. You can save up to 30% on your fuel/energy costs while maintaining a comfortable climate enables livestock to feed into live weight more efficiently, the curtain makes your barn warmer in winter and cooler in summer.

Our curtains are available in both 4 and 6 ply, both of which are faced with a impervious white vinyl layer which faces the elements. With all these benefits, the average payback is two years!

A lower cost alternative to the insulated curtains, are Lapp's single layer curtains. You still get all the benefits of using a high quality curtain to keep the elements outside and being able to lower the curtain to naturally ventilate in your barn.

'Junior' Wins Senior Competition At Manheim Steer Show

ANDY ANDREWS

Lancaster Farming Staff
MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) —

Last year, Casey High's steer, "Big Guy," got as far as reserve overall champion at the Manheim Farm Show. This year, with an ironic twist, Casey's steer "Junior" went all the way, picking up supreme for the second time in three years for the Lititz exhibitor.

Casey, 17, son of Mae and Larry High, Lititz, exhibited his 1,277-pound Angus/Maine Anjou crossbred, the heavyweight winner in the 4-H show, to supreme market champion at the Manheim Farm Show Tuesday night.

Show judge Ned Sayre, a registered Angus cattleman from Waffle Hill Farm in Churchville, Md., said the champion steer "puts together the size, weight, and degree of conditioning necessary in a steer today."

Casey obtained the champion steer from Jeff Miller, Indiana.
Casey, a Warwick High School junior, said it was a combination of feeding and training that garnered him a championship.

Melissa showed "Stew," an Angus/Maine Anjou/Simmental crossbred to reserve overall market steer champion. Melissa, 17, daughter of Marlin and Nancy Becker, Manheim, showed the 1,205-pound light heavyweight to reserve champion. The West Virginia steer was obtained at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition.

Melissa named the steer "Stew"

Jodi Shows 'Jeremy' To Manheim Market Goat Champion

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Strong feet and width of muscling garnered a champion market goat for Jodi Gebhard, 16, Manheim on Wednesday at the Manheim Dairy Goat Show.

Jodi, daughter of Sonia and Mike Gebhard, showed her 9-month-old Nubian named "Jeremy" to grand champion.

Reserve champion was shown by Jacey Fisher, 16, Manheim. Jacey, also a junior at Manheim Central, also obtained the goat from Jacob Fisher's farm. Jacey's reserve heavyweight goat weighed 105 pounds.

In the dairy goat show Wednesday night, judge Rick Stoneback, LaMancha breeder from Oxford, picked Nicole Eisenhower's goat as grand champion. Reserve was shown by Amanda Grube.

In addition, the Manheim Farm Show 4-H Pygmy Goat Show was held on Wednesday. Dennis Stauffer, judge from Myerstown and a pygmy goat breeder, selected the senior doe shown by Michael Stoner to grand champion.

Stauffer said he liked the doe for its "overall body capacity, straight top line — a real beautiful animal." Michael showed Creekside Farms Missy.

The reserve pygmy goat was shown by Jason Landis. Krishon Kids Picabo, the intermediate doe. Stauffer said he chose the doe as reserve champion "because it has a really nice head."

In the dairy goat show, there were a total of 71 goats and 23 exhibitors. Following is a list of show placings.

Wivell Shows Grand Holstein At Manheim

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff
MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — A 3-year-old Holstein owned by Joe Wivell of Columbia on Thursday was named grand and senior champion of the Manheim Farm Show Holstein Show. The Wivell family owns Donagel Creek Farm and has been a regular exhibitor at some area shows, having shown champions at Elizabethtown as well.

The Manheim Farm Show dairy shows featured three dairy cattle breeds, though Holsteins far out numbered the three Jersey cattle and one Guernsey.

Judge of the show was Creedin Cornman, of Carlisle. Despite the fact that it was the only entry in its breed, Cornman said that Jason Henisee's senior calf was one of the best Guernseys he's ever seen. Of course it was named junior champion and grand champion.

In the Jersey show, a 4-year-old owned by Denise Bollinger, of Manheim, was named senior and grand champion.

The junior champion and reserve grand champion was a senior calf owned by Marsha Balmer. Bollinger's junior yearling was named reserve junior champion.

The reserve grand champion Holstein was a junior 2-year-old owned by Jason Howes, of Elizabethtown. It was also the grand champion 4-H and FFA Holstein.

Marsha Balmer, daughter of Cletus and Jean Balmer, of Manheim, showed the junior champion Holstein, a junior calf. It was also the junior champion of the youth division.

In showmanship, a contest for the youth, Heather Brubaker, daughter of Lowell and Deb, was named senior and overall champion. Kristopher Martin was named junior-aged champion showman.

People, Quality Product, At Forefront Of Egg Industry Success

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — The days of "simply concentrating on what is going on in the cages are over" if egg producers want to remain profitable, according to John Schwartz, Lancaster County extension director.

And smaller businesses can be competitive if they concentrate on the importance of the "people that make up this industry," he said.

Schwartz spoke to 24 producers and agri-industry representatives on Monday at a Penn-State sponsored poultry health and management meeting at Kreider's Restaurant.

Between 1990-1993, Pennsylvania's egg production grew at a 51 percent rate, mostly because of producers who concentrated on improving production. If that same growth would continue, by the year 2000, there would be more than 6 billion eggs produced by the layer houses in the state with 21 million hens, according to Schwartz.

But consumers' insistence on quality will rule. And producers must focus on producing not only a quality product, but a consistent one.

"The consumer wants to buy today what they bought two weeks ago," said Schwartz. He said that consumers want a consistent product that is dependable — including eggs in the size range they want at the least cost.

Producers could do a lot more to market their product and seek out and develop new markets. In the Midwest, there are seven or eight available markets for egg products, where in the East, there are few.

Schwartz gleaned these conclusions by doing an informal study of producers and agri-industry representatives at the recent Northeast Poultry Show, by reading trade publications, and through his own personal experience in the industry.

"I'm not a prophet and I'm not going to pretend to be a prophet," he said. Many of these conclusions are the result of personal prejucides and through his job, which supports the egg industry, he indicated.

Schwartz said that the industry is a growing one, but with different rates of growth.

The focus for producers must be on the employees and the people who make a difference. Companies with the right attitude — that strive to keep costs down, product quality high, and hold onto quality employees — will successfully adapt to consumer changes.

"The producer of tomorrow will have to be a better marketer" to survive, according to Schwartz.

Contractors must learn to think more like business owners and act as marketers and educators.

Most of all, "people make things work," said Schwartz. That, combined with a quality product, makes Pennsylvania successful as an egg producer on a national level.

Penn State Livestock Judging Team Wins At Eastern National

TIMONIUM, Md. — On Saturday, Sept. 30, the Penn State Livestock Judging Team made a strong showing here at the Eastern National Livestock Show Collegiate Judging Contest.

The team enjoyed a precontest workout at the farm of Frank and Julie Feeser (Duroc, Hampshire, and Yorkshire swine) in Taneytown, Md. The Feesers drove before the students four classes of hogs and then provided a delicious noontime meal and the opportunity to view some of their crossbred and Angus cows and calves.

Team members that represented Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science included Kim Black, senior in dairy and animal science from Tionesta (Forest County); Jay Brehm, senior in dairy and animal science from Windber (Somerset County); Scott Brown, senior in dairy and animal science from Mill Creek (Huntingdon County); Brian Hrutkay, senior in dairy and animal science from Bentleyville (Washington County); Christopher Kling, senior in dairy and animal science from Hope, N.J.; Brian McAllister, senior in dairy and animal science from Centre Hall (Centre County); Todd Rabenold, senior in dairy and animal science from Kutztown (Berks County); and Jennifer Sweitzer, senior in agricultural business management from Glen Rock (York County).

The Eastern National Livestock Show judging contest was the first contest for the Penn State team during fall semester. The team finished second judging beef cattle and swine and then outpaced the competition by a considerable margin judging sheep to finish first in that species and first overall. Additionally, six Penn State team members finished among the top 10 individuals in oral reasons, and Penn State won oral reasons as a team.

In the individual categories, Penn State team members enjoyed success and finished with several noteworthy placings. In beef cattle judging, Brian Hrutkay and Jen Sweitzer led the Penn State team and finished fifth and sixth overall with tie score of 314 out of 350 points. Closely behind them were Brian McAllister (313 points) and Scott Brown (310 points) in seventh and eighth, respectively.

In swine judging, Chris Kling was high individual after accumulating 279 out of 300 points. Jen Sweitzer and Scott Brown rounded out the top 10 individuals judging swine finishing fourth (262 points) and seventh (259 points), respectively. Although seven students could judge for each team, only the top five scores counted toward each team's total.

Todd Rabenold, one of Penn State's two alternates, would have finished fifth in swine had he earned enough points to contribute to the team's score.

The sheep judging division was grouped a little more tightly as Brian McAllister (233 points out of 250), Chris Kling (229), and Scott Brown (226) finished first, second, and third, respectively, and Brian Hrutkay claimed seventh (221).

Jay Brehm, the other Penn State alternate, accumulated 227 points and would have finished third in sheep had his total score counted toward the team's total.

Members of the Penn State team garnered six out of the top 10 spots in oral reasons and out-distanced the competition to win oral reasons as a team.

Chris Kling (257 points out of 300), Todd Rabenold (251), Brian McAllister (248), and Scott Brown (247) finished third through sixth, respectively, and Jen Sweitzer (243) and Brian Hrutkay (243) rounded out the top 10 by finishing ninth and tenth, respectively.

As individuals overall in the contest, Chris Kling won by 6 points over the next closest competitor scoring 801 points out of 900 possible. Scott Brown finished second with a score of 795, while Jen Sweitzer (793), Brian McAllister (781) and Brian Hrutkay (773) finished fourth, seventh and ninth, respectively.

Farm Bill Debate Likely To Focus On Trade-Offs

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — With only 2 percent of Americans directly involved in growing the nation's food, upcoming debate over the 1995 Farm Bill is likely to focus on trade-offs among the concerns of farmers, consumers, environmentalists and other groups, a Penn State agricultural economist said recently.

"As policy decisions are crafted, compromises will need to be made among the interests of many different people, from farmers to environmental activists," said Dr. Milton Hallberg, professor of agricultural economics in the College of Agricultural Sciences. "Our policies need to accommodate these trade-offs in an economically sound and socially acceptable manner."

Hallberg has co-edited a book about the issues expected to be part of the debate leading up to 1995 U.S. food and agricultural legislation. "Food, Agriculture, and Rural Policy Into the Twenty-First Century: Issues and Trade-Offs," published by Westview Press, offers recent information concerning a wide array of fundamental concerns. The book reviews diverse policy approaches for dealing with these issues and assesses trade-offs among these alternatives.

Debate also is likely over how to best protect the environment while making agricultural production as efficient as possible.

"Food, Agriculture, and Rural Policy Into the Twenty-First Century: Issues and Trade-Offs" was edited by Hallberg; Robert G. F. Spitze, professor of agricultural economics at the University of Illinois; and Daryll Ray, professor of agricultural economics and rural sociology at the University of Tennessee.

"Each chapter focuses on a current or emerging public concern that is likely to be a focus of attention in 1995 policy," Hallberg said. "The chapters were written by specialists chosen for their particular expertise from among the top analysts and educators in agricultural economics."

"We hope the book will be a valuable guide for lawmakers, agricultural educators, agricultural and food industry leaders, and interest groups concerned about the future of agriculture in the United States," Hallberg said.

Farmland Preservation

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)—Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius has announced the approval of easement purchases for two farms encompassing 518 acres of prime farmland.

"Through this program, quality farmland is protected for future generations," Brosius said.

The Farmland Protection Program was initiated in 1989 with a $100 million bond issue approved by Pennsylvania voters. The program allows the state and counties to purchase development rights—referred to as easements—to guarantee that farms will remain as agricultural land.

With today's easement purchases, 559 farms in 31 counties will have joined the program or had easements approved, protecting 69,752 acres. Since Jan. 1, easement purchases have been approved for 9,025 acres on 73 farms in 24 counties.

Following are the two properties approved, including owner, township, acreage and purchase cost.

DAVID BIGELOW
Training Coordinator

Overfeeding or underfeeding adequate levels of protein can be a dairyman's nightmare. Failure to observe and respond to such a situation may be costly in the total pounds of milk a cow produces as well as reproductive and health problems.

Cows need to be fed adequate levels of protein to maximize milk production. This statement simply points out that there is a direct financial relationship between pounds of milk shipped versus pounds of protein fed.

Feeding protein in excess of what the cow needs does not increase milk production further. The outcome can be simply the opposite with the result in infertility and repeat breeding. When dealing with early lactation cows, the increased risk of ketosis is greatly enhanced with excess protein feeding.

Continuous monitoring of milk urea nitrogen (MUN) can be helpful in recognizing when forages may have changed and when protein supplementation needs to be adjusted.

Normal values of MUN are between 12-16 milligrams per deciliter (mg/dl). Some research suggests reproduction may be adversely affected when levels exceed 18/mg/dl.

On a herd basis, if the values are outside of the normal range, the dairyman should consult other professionals such as veterinarians, nutritionists and county agents.

Have your Pa. DHIA technician include MUN testing on your next testday. You can receive MUN results at only an additional 15 cents per cow.

Dairymen currently not enrolled in a testing program at Pa. DHIA may receive MUN results through the sample analysis program available at a cost of 65 cents per sample, with a 30-cow minimum, plus shipping and meter rental which includes fat, protein, SCC and MUN test results.

Available also is the ability to just receive MUN and protein at 50 cents per sample, with a 30-cow minimum, plus shipping and meter rental.

Please feel free to contact Pa. DHIA at 1-800-344-8378 if we can assist in your dairy operation.

Big Bucks For Big Winners At KILE's Simmental Futurity

ANDY ANDREWS

Lancaster Farming Staff
HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)

— Everyone knows that big fairs can pay big premiums for big shows. But what can be bigger than $1,000 for a grand champion?

Try $1,100 each for the junior champion heifer and junior champion bull at this year's Simmental Capital Futurity Contest.

Junior reserve champion heifer and bull each paid $600. Reserve champion of the junior division bull competition was Meadow Hill Farm, Purcellville, Va: Jack Schultz of Salem, N.J., had the reserve champion heifer, a Black Powder daughter out of a Back In Black dam in the junior division.

The Snyders started the Capital Futurity Contest and have managed it since the first show in 1990.

In this year's Futurity, senior champion bull paid $500 and reserve paid $300.

John Lenzer of Sewickly, Allegheny County, showed Harvest Lenzner Princess, grand champion heifer in the senior division. Grand champion senior bull was won by Shoemaker's Fort Knox, owned by William Shoemaker of Maple Cove Breeders, Bedford County.

To participate, contestants had to pay $100 to nominate a farm and an additional $125 per animal exhibited. Exhibitors can "select the best calves in May and pay to nominate them," said Barbara Carlisle, Claysville, a Simmental breeder with about 25 cows.

Carlisle indicated that the final payment of $125 doesn't have to be paid by the exhibitor unless the calves are scheduled to appear in the contest.

Carlisle, who serves as junior adviser to the Pennsylvania Junior Simmental Association, assisted at this year's Futurity contest.

Contest winners are decided by total overall points awarded during judging. Three judges make their decisions and place the points (from 1-10) on individual index cards. Points are tallied and the highest wins.

The judges at this year's contest were Cliff Orley, Lebanon; Paul Slayton, Bedford; and Bret Barber, Michigan State University.

In all, there were a total of 13 exhibitors. In the junior contests, there were a total of 20 heifers and eight bulls at the start of the contest. In the senior competition, there were a total of four heifers and one bull.

Zeigler Wraps Up County Fair Season With Repeat Of Last Year's Performance

LOU ANN GOOD

Lancaster Farming Staff
MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) —

A different year and a different judge but for Corby Zeigler it was a replay of last year's sheep show at the Manheim Fair.

"It's just like last year," the ecstatic 11-year-old said as he clutched the trophy for the sheep that won over all market and sale lamb entries. Both years, Corby said that he placed fifth in showmanship and then went on to place first in the heavyweight sale lamb class, the sale lamb overall, and then the grand champion market sale lamb.

Corby kept a glimmer of hope all through the seven-hour show with 115 entries that he might have a repeat performance.

"But my dad thought he was a little too heavy and didn't think he'd make it," Corby said giving the 127-pound sheep a pat on the head.

The son of Dean and Carole Zeigler of Lititz attributes his success in the show ring to plenty of walking every day with his sheep. The Zeiglers purchased their sheep from Lloyd Reiff of Strasburg.

His brother Brandon gave him some opposition in the show ring when he took first place in another heavyweight class, but it was the Donough brothers that brought the stiffest competition.

Travis Donough claimed the reserve heavyweight champion and the reserve sale lamb championship but when his brother brought his champion market lamb back into the show ring, judge Tim Fleener selected it for the reserve champion overall.

The Donough brothers are the sons of Ed and LaRue Donough of Manheim. The Donoughs breed their own sheep, and Ryan's champion market lamb that was named reserve overall is a home-bred cross. Named Eclipse, the sheep was also claimed a championship at the Denver Fair.

The 11-year-old said that Eclipse will not be sold but will be used for breeding on their farm.

Ryan also placed first in showmanship in his age division.

Jessica Stoltzfus, daughter of Frank and Irene Stoltzfus, of Elizabethtown took the lightweight market lamb title and then the reserve market lamb title.

The breeding sheep champion trophy went to Jessica Schmidt of Drumore.

"It's my favorite," Jessica said of the Dorset named Mateau. Jessica, the daughter of Peter and Laurie Schmidt, said that Mateau was bred from a Sleepy Hollow ewe and a Nix Besser ram. Mateau won championships before at the 4-H Fair and at Lampeter Fair.

Showmanship winners in the age 15 and older bracket went to Jessica Stoltzfus, first; Jill Hoffines, second, and Amy Bollinger, third.

In the 12-14-year-old division, showmanship winners were Jessica Schmidt, first; Kerra Allen, second, and Jennifer Zimmerman, third.

Age 11 and under showmanship winners were Ryan Donough, first; Jonathan Kauffman, second, and Andy Bollinger, third.

sister Tracy showed at the Ephrata Fair two weeks earlier.

Although it was the first year that the 11-year-old Derick showed a grand champion market hog, he and his sisters Tracy and Amy are familiar names showing in hog competition throughout the county. The children of Eugene and Carol Bollinger raise hogs and sheep on their Manheim Farm.

Judge Russell Kegg, a Bedford County commercial hog breeder, said of the champions of each division: "It's sad that I must pull out only one champion from this fine group of hogs. They are all top of the line. If you bred the hog, you can be proud of doing such a fine job. If you purchased it, you can be proud for making such a fine selection."

A newcomer to competition took the reserve grand champion market title. It was the first year that 12-year-old Jonathan Haldeman showed hogs, although his family has a 1,000-head finisher unit on their Manheim farm.

"I had this feeling I would win after it was named the medium-heavyweight champion," Jonathan said.

His parents, John and Kay Haldeman weren't as optimistic. His dad said, "I knew he would be competing against kids who had money and went to other states to buy a good hog. I told him (Jonathan) that we are just going to pull a few head from our farm and what he gets is just going to need to be good enough."

Those hogs, raised by Dale Rohrer in Lititz before finishing out on the Haldeman farm, matched the best.

Derick's champion and Jonathan's reserve champion had stiff competition from the champions in each division selected from more than 100 head. The lightweight champion was shown by Melissa Becker and the reserve by Dwight Lehman. Travis Donough showed the champion medium-weight and Kevin Pfautz, the reserve. Kyle Ward showed the reserve medium heavyweight champion and Jeffrey Rohrer, the reserve heavyweight.

Showmanship competition was divided into four categories. Amy Bollinger topped the 16-years and over; Lisa Pfautz, 14- and 15-year-olds; Kyle Ward, the 11-13-year-olds; and Nicole Kreider, the 8-10 year olds.

Turkey Industry Can Develop Program

by a bacteria), which can be just as deadly, especially for the very young, very old, or immunosuppressed.

The Centers for Disease Control and the USDA Animal Plant Health and Inspection Service agree that 95 percent of the cases of foodborne illness occur because food is not properly handled and prepared. "At proper temperature, one bacterium can become 16 million within eight hours," said Kradel.

Kradel said that HACCP can briefly be described as "Number 1, say what you will do; number 2, do what you say; and three, be able to prove it." The BMP strategy, while similar to HACCP, can be just as effective in ensuring control of foodborne pathogens, except that HACCP is more record-intensive.

A turkey BMP would be:

- Purchase healthy poulters from breeder flocks monitored for Salmonella.

- Have rodent control program.

- Place birds in clean, well-ventilated facilities.

- Attend to feed quality and proper feed storage. Use well-formulated and properly pelletized-crumbled feeds.

- Use closed (nipples) drinking system.

- Use competitive exclusion (CE) product (antibiotics) post-hatch.

A detailed HACCP program is similar, but more record-based:

- Purchase poulters that are Salmonella negative from Salmonella-negative flocks and test on arrival. If positive, have plan on what to do.

Dennis Wages, North Carolina State University, spoke to turkey producers on Thursday.

- Follow a written and regularly monitored rodent control program. Index rodent populations. Intensify efforts if rodent index exceeds one.

- Clean, disinfect, and or fumigate house between flocks if prior flock is Salmonella positive. Culture house for Salmonella before bird placement.

- Require feed supplied to be formulated from Salmonella-monitored APPI participant protein source. Use pelletized-crumbled feeds. Possibly require negative Salmonella certification and randomly test feed for Salmonella.

- Use closed (nipple) drinking system. Test water for coliforms and chlorinate water regularly if positive.

- Use competitive exclusion (antibiotic) product.

The turkey industry needs some form of BMP or HACCP strategy because "it's obviously a hot political issue," said Kradel.

Importantly, education is a key factor if the turkey industry wants to be able to survive. Already, according to Dan Benson, Rocco Enterprises, who also spoke about the implications of food safety on turkey growers, the seafood industry has begun to work closely with USDA in developing a HACCP-type program.

There will never, however, be a completely sterile food supply, because of the normal "competitive" nature of the naturally occurring bacteria. "We've failed to let people know about the normality of things," said Kradel, and that there will always be chances for the presence of salmonella in the food supply. It is most important to try to control the level and make sure consumers cook the food properly and follow proper sanitation levels at all times.

A critical part of a BMP or HACCP strategy is the use of medications and antibiotics. But "I would 10-times rather see people react to the management aspects of turkeys — to making the turkeys comfortable — than using antibiotics," said Dennis Wages, North Carolina State University.

Wages spoke about feed antibiotics — "the most underutilized method in turkeys and broilers" — and how there is nothing magic to the procedure.

Wages went over some scenarios regarding when and how to medicate birds in possible disease situations.

He cautioned the producers to make sure they understand the label and make sure they follow the therapeutic regimen on the label. Also, if using medications and antibiotics, producers should make sure they consider several factors when "compounding" or combining treatments.

Wages reviewed the various types of antibiotics available, including a description of each, the usage, dose, and effective use for a range of treatment scenarios. He also emphasized the importance of closely monitoring the treatment.

There is work under way to "fast track" labels so they could be more easily read and understood.

"I think there is a need or at least a reason to look at feed medication not only from an expense standpoint but as followup therapy — it's an excellent choice."

Other sessions at the day-long seminar included water quality/nipple systems, poult quality, cleaning and disinfecting houses prior to placement, and poult enteritis/sudden death.

"I don't think we have an option of not developing some type of program," said Dr. David Kradel, industry coordinator of the Pa. Egg Quality Assurance Program (PEQAP), left, on Thursday. Kradel spoke during a panel with Dan Benson, Rocco Enterprises.

be the best indicator of potential yield. Individual plants may respond to low plant population by producing more stems per square foot.

Wisconsin research shows that maximum yields are produced with 55 or more stems per square foot. Next spring, after growth starts, return to suspected fields and count the number of stems per square foot. When stems average only 40 per square foot, yields are reduced by 25 percent.

Identification of suspected fields in the fall will save time next spring when things are rushed.

Editor:

On Monday, September 25, I was helping to entertain preschool and kindergartners who were waiting for an FFA member to give them a tour of the Farm Show Complex during the All American Dairy Show. Some other dairy princesses and I were explaining the route that milk takes to get from the cow to the store where their parents buy it. I was asked to assist on one tour because it was a particularly large group and only one FFA member, Ann from Cedar Crest, was available for the tour.

When we came to where the cows were being milked the children were able to see part of what we, as dairy princesses, had explained to them earlier. I would like to especially thank two farmers who took the time to explain the milking process to these children.

These farmers even opened the bulk tank and pointed out the "HUGE" milk truck to these students. Unfortunately, I didn't have a chance to get your names and addresses for a more personal note of thanks, so I hope that this paper makes its way into your hands.

I pray that the children's appetite for learning touched you, as your willingness, patience and enthusiasm to share your knowledge with them encouraged me to continue to do my best to promote this wonderful industry.

These children will probably not remember everything you told them but at least they were impressed by the cleanliness and the technology used in the production of their food.

THANK YOU!!!!

Diane E. Yoder

There is no fee for the deer control permit, but farmers must keep records (on provided forms) of the deer killed and, for practical purposes, send weekly reports to the local commission wildlife conservation officer — whether or not any deer were killed.

Deer taken are to be tagged with a special tag provided by the commission.

All unused tags and permits are to be returned to the commission within five days of the expiration of the permits.

Within the realm of approved devices for taking whitetail deer, the farmer can further restrict what type of firearm or bows can be used on his land to kill deer during the off-season.

As it is now, deer causing damage on farms are to be destroyed by farmers at a rate as those deer are used by the farmer.

Under this new program, the farmer doesn't have to do any shooting, processing or consumption of deer killed for crop damage. He can issue a subpermit to someone else, most likely a deer hunter familiar to the farmer, to do those things.

In order to be eligible to participate in this new program, a farmer must first allow public deer hunting on his property for at least two years under the existing Deer Damage Area Program (also known as the Hot Spot program).

Public access during the regular deer hunting season continues under this new program.

But, now the farmer has control over hunters when the farmer actually needs crop-damaging deer killed.

Spring and late summer are key periods for crop damage by deer. Spring is crucial for crop establishment and late summer and early fall are critical preharvest periods.

The approval of the program represents a negotiated agreement between crop farmers, sportsmen organizations, and the Game Commission.

In retrospect, the core of the long-standing controversial issue has been that crop farmers value crops over deer, while sportsmen value deer over crops.

Also key to that has been a reluctance by the commission and sportsmen to allow landowners additional deer harvest rights.

Merely offering landowners the ability to kill more deer would most likely provide an incentive for more posted land, more claims of deer damage, allow those not suffering deer damage to take advantage of deer harvest rights, and make herd management more difficult.

Additionally, wild whitetail deer are commonwealth property, and making commonwealth property more legally accessible to landowners rather than non-landowners could spark cries of preferential treatment and unfairness.

This new program attempts to address the issues all around.

Details have been worked out so as to come up with a mutually agreeable and fair program to all interested parties.

It provides for public hunting during the regular deer hunting seasons.

It allows crop-damaging deer to be killed when most of the damage is likely to occur and killing is more likely to be an effective tool.

It allows the farmer to decide who gets on his land to kill excess deer, and he has some control over the number of permits issued and thus the number and behavior of people attempting to kill deer off of the farm.

It also allows the farmer to decide what type of legal method for killing deer best suits his farm and activities.

The new program has been praised by the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB), that has, along with other organizations, been seeking some type of system to allow farmers more control over deer populations on their farms.

According to Joel Rotz, wildlife damage specialist for the PFB, the commission's approval of the permitting program comes after at least five years of effort.

"Obviously we're elated that it's finally passed," he said this week. "It came about as a result from compromise and input from sportsmen's groups. And with their support we were able to get the Game Commission's support."

Rotz said the approval from commission comes as good news during a year in which weather and commodity prices have worked against the farmer.

"We feel it's at least a glimmer of good news or the farmers who've been getting bad news with weather and drought. Farmers further disadvantaged by this (deer damage) problem will have another tool to use."

"Our concern is to keep Pennsylvania farmers economically competitive with the rest of nation," Rotz said. "We're no longer in protected markets and the more we can do to keep a level playing field the better."

He said that the program offers some recourse to farmers suffering from deer damage.

Further, Rotz said the PFB is ready to help make the program a success.

"We stand ready to work with the Game Commission to resolve any concerns or problems that result from this program," he said.

The outlook for acceptance from the public seems good.

The general deer hunting public has seen a great reduction in land available for trespass.

Over the past 20 to 30 years, vast areas of previously open land has been closed with changes in ownership and legal decisions.

Some largely blame court judgements about landowner liability, and the unavailability of insurance or high premium rates charged if landowners allow public trespass.

Whether correct or incorrect, other reasons cited by people for the lack of open land to the public includes increased demand and abuse of the land by the general public; an increase in traditional hunting grounds being used for residential or other commercial development; an apparent decrease in desire by landowners to share the benefits of the land; and an increase in animal (Turn to Page A35) pathies and anti-hunting by non-hunting landowners.

Ironically, at the same time some farmers surrounded by private woodlands report seeing a hundred or more deer in their crop fields at night, hunters have been complaining about low numbers of deer on public lands and blaming liberal deer harvesting rules and a perceived lack of proper game-lands management for deer.

Farmer frustration over deer damage has come from the fact that their crops have been feeding deer, and they have had no easy recourse.

A fact about crop-damaging deer is that they are mostly active at night, preventing effective control.

They also can quickly become accustomed to devices intended to scare them away from crops.

Further, some farmers who have destroyed deer in their crop fields have reported that following such kills, there have been significant incidents of vandalism to their equipment, such as slashed tractor tires.

Though mostly unable to name individuals responsible for the acts, the farmers have said they suspect local deer hunting enthusiasts as most likely to have done the vandalism. The suspicion is that the acts are done as a sort of terrorism to dissuade the farmer from killing additional crop-damaging deer.

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, October 14, 1995-A35

Another problem for the farmer — especially today with economic pressures forcing many to utilize idle land — is that most of the crop-damaging deer spend most of their time in adjacent woodlands, not on the farm.

In many cases, those adjacent woodlands are not open to public hunting, and the deer population is little affected by public hunting on the crop-damaged farm.

Also, regular deer hunting seasons are held when crops are at harvest stage and fields either provide the deer with dense concealment and food from a mature crop, or offer nothing to attract or hold the deer on the farm.

Thus the opportunity for a regular season deer hunt to kill crop-damaging deer is limited.

From the hunter's point of view, hunting deer-damaged farms is generally best during the early archery season, before general season hunting pressures force the deer to seek refuge on non-public woodlands.

A little more than two years ago the Game Commission attempted to better resolve the problem of farmers by instituting a Deer Damage Area Program, also referred to as the commission's "Hot Spot" program.

Under that program, farmers must allow public deer hunting on their land. Signs are posted along the perimeter of the property, and, upon request by a hunter, the regional headquarters of the Game Commission also directs hunters to program lands.

According to some farmers enrolled in the program, success has been limited.

Generally the complaint from farmers has been that the general hunting public has not had much success in killing deer because the deer take refuge on surrounding private lands.

Last year, hunters on Hot Spot farms were allowed to harvest deer during extended seasons.

This year, during the regular antlered season, hunters with antlerless deer licenses will be allowed to fill that tag.

The new permitting program is different. It targets a period of time when hunting and crop protection effectiveness can coincide.

As a prerequisite to eligibility to participate, farmers must have their farms enrolled in the Commission's Hot Spot program for two years.

After that condition has been met, the farmer can make an application for a deer control permit. (Can be made through a district wildlife conservation officer (WCO) on a Game Commission form.)

At the time of application, the applicant is to provide a copy of a deed or lease that shows the applicant to either be the owner of the land or have control of the hunting rights on the land.

In addition to the state's general ban on Sunday hunting, on general

Look To Lancaster Chamber Banquet For 'Managing Changes'

Dr. David M. Kohl

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — How do you manage changes in agriculture?

That's the question the guest speaker of the 19th annual Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry Agriculture Committee banquet will try to tackle.

The banquet is scheduled Tuesday, Nov. 21 at the Lancaster Host Convention Center. Reception is at 6 p.m. and dinner is at 7 p.m.

Guest speaker is Dr. David M. Kohl, professor of agriculture finance and small business entrepreneurship at Virginia Polytechnic Institute. As an educator, Kohl has provided insights into financial management and the future of agriculture in more than 1,200 workshops covering 42 states. Kohl has published four books and more than 125 articles on financial and business-related topics.

Kohl was one of the leaders in establishing guidelines for the standardized reporting and analysis of agricultural producers' financial information on a national basis. His topic will be "The A-B-C's of Managing Changes In Agriculture."

At the banquet, Charles Brosius, Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture, will present the Century Farm awards for Lancaster County. Also, the recipient of the George C. Delp Award for outstanding individual contribution to agriculture will be announced.

For more information on the evening of entertainment, information, and interaction in Lancaster County agriculture, contact Jim Shirk at the Lancaster Chamber at (717) 397-3531, ext. 51. Deadline for reservations is Nov. 15.

Longhorn herd on display. A special highlight was the hand feeding of gentle Texas Longhorns.

With the 24th annual Rubberneck Tour successfully completed, organizers have promptly started plans for the 25th annual tour, scheduled for the fall of 1996.

Deer Permits

crop farms, deer may not be killed from May 16 to July 31.

For vegetable farms, the permit hunting is closed from May 16 to June 30.

These no-hunting periods have been established to allow deer to fawn and raise their young while crop damage is generally limited (because of the crop's growth stage and behavior of deer).

Those allowed to hunt with a permit must be at least 18 years old, be a bona fide resident of the state and possess a valid hunting license.

Further, hunters using a permit must wear at least 250 square inches of daylight fluorescent orange-colored material on the head, chest, and back combined, so it is visible on the hunter from 360 degrees.

Each successful subpermit hunter is to tag the deer and report the kill to the farmer/permittee.

While the program has been approved, the application forms, the permit forms and the reporting forms are yet to be developed by the Game Commission.

According to Dave Overcash, with the Commission's Bureau of Law Enforcement, those already enrolled in the Hot Spot program will be notified by letter of the effective dates, details, and availability of forms.

Those wishing to become involved who are not currently enrolled in the Hot Spot program should inquire through their regional Game Commission headquarters office.

Regional offices are located in Franklin at (814) 437-4278 or 1-800-533-6764; in Ligonier at (412) 832-5316 or 1-800-243-8519; in Jersey Shore at (717) 893-2451 or 1-800-422-7551; in Huntingdon at (814) 946-7247 or 1-800-422-7554; in Dallas at (717) 826-5414 or 1-800-228-0789; and in Reading at (610) 378-4355 or 1-800-228-0791.

Wool Makes Fashion Statement At KILE

LOU ANN GOOD

Lancaster Farming Staff
HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)
— Stylish yearling ewes lead by shepherds and shepherdesses dressed in wool finery attracted spectators at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) last Saturday.

For the third year, Laura Langlotz of Monkton, Md., captured first place in the senior division. In the intermediate division, Kelly Glaser of Limekiln took first place, and in the junior division, Katie McKissick of New Castle placed first.

Thirty-three participated in the Keystone Leadline, which showcases the best of the sheep and the classic fashions of wool modeled by the entrants.

The crowd that gathered to watch the leadline often chose a person they thought should win in each of the divisions. Sometimes they agreed with the judges and at other times were surprised. But judges based their decisions on a 100-point scale that allotted 40 points for the contestant and the contestant's outfit, 25 points for control and presentation, and 35 points for the appearance of the ewe.

Since the exhibitor is expected to have his or her sheep under control at all times, an uncooperative sheep could cause a drastic drop in a score. The entrants' outfit needed to be made from at least 80 percent wool. Although participants did not need to sew their own outfits, some did and many had family members who either stitched, knit, or wove the wool.

First-place in the intermediate division goes to Kelly Glaser and her Corriedale ewe, Diane. Kelly's grandmother, Ruth Hartman, helped Kelly knit her sweater. Kelly knit a matching scrunchie for her hair and the matching scarf for her sheep.

Katie Lynn McKissick took top honors in the junior division with her Suffolk yearling ewe that sports a plaid tam that matches Katie's vest.

For the third year, Laura Langlotz, left, took first place in the senior division. Third-place winner Hilda Mitchell spun, wove, and stitched her suit and blouse from Oxford and Romney wool.

First-place senior division Laura, who is also the Maryland Lamb and Wool Queen, modeled a 100 percent purple wool crepe dress topped with a patchwork vest, which Laura constructed by strip stitching. Clover, her yearling ewe, sported a rosette made from fabric scrapes that matched Laura's outfit. Laura is a sophomore at Villa Julie College where she is studying early childhood education.

Second-place in the senior division was Andrea Musser of New Middletown, Ohio. She modeled a loden green and plum plaid jacket and a straight plum-colored skirt. A high school senior, Andrea is involved in many activities and holds offices in 4-H. She is director and vice-president of the Ohio Junior Suffolk Sheep Association.

Third place in the senior division went to Hilda Mitchell. She spun 20,000 yards of yarn from the wool of her registered Oxford and a Romney sheep then wove the wool into fabric and tailored a gray tweed suit from it and a cream-colored blouse.

Hilda, from Skaneateles, N.Y., will head to New Zealand in January to study wool science for one semester at Lincoln University. When she returns, she will continue her studies in wool and textiles at Cornell University.

In the intermediate division, first-place Kelly Glaser modeled a 100 percent wool skirt and a wool sweater that she and her grandmother knit from wool spun from her flock of Corriedales. Kelly, who is 14 years old, also knit a matching scarf worn by her Corriedale ewe Diane.

Second-place in the intermediate division was Shanna Lynn Kephart of Enon Valley. She wore a 100 percent wool suit accented with a black velvet collar and cuffs. She led a Southdown ewe. The 13-year-old is active in several 4-H clubs in addition to the sheep club. She has participated in five leadline competitions this year.

Emily Rutledge of Jarrettsville, Md., placed third in the intermediate division. She modeled a cranberry-cinnamon colored wool jumper that she made and led a Suffolk ewe.

Katie Lynn McKissick of New Castle took top honors in the junior division. She wore a hunter green 100 percent wool pleated skirt with a coordinated red plaid wool vest. Her registered Suffolk ewe wore a matching plaid tam.

Twelve-year-old Katie had placed third in a previous KILE competition. She has 40 registered Suffolks in her name that she raises on her parents' (Brenda and Jeffrey McKissick's) farm.

Second-place in the junior division went to Emmalynn Little of Churchville, Md. The 9-year-old wore a 100-percent wool plaid dress. She chose the fabric because it is the clan tartan of her father's ancestors.

She led Rochelle, a registered Jacob yearling ewe, which is an ancient breed dating back to biblical times. She and her family raise a flock of Jacobs, Dorsets, and Suffolk-cross sheep.

ner was Amanda Miller of Mertztown. She wore a 100 percent royal blue crepe wool dress. The 10-year-old led a Southdown ewe named Peaches adorned with a matching halter and royal blue wool bow.

Division winners received $150 premiums from Woolrich, Inc., Lebanon Valley National Bank, and the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Grower's Association. Additional cash premiums were also offered and gifts were given from breed associations.

Second-place in the junior division went to Emmalynn Little and her Jacob yearling ewe. The ancient breed dates back to biblical times.

Consuming Thoughts

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.

Today's consumers are increasingly concerned about healthy eating. They want good taste while keeping a careful eye on the amount of calories and fat they are consuming. One of the most celebrated farm-grown foods that is available this time of year also fits the bill as an excellent health food is the pumpkin. This fruit of the vine is marketed as a vegetable and in addition to its good nutritional value, it offers taste, versatility and convenience.

Pumpkin is the richest fruit-vegetable source of Vitamin A in the form of beta-carotene. According to medical studies, beta-carotene-rich foods as part of a healthful diet may help lower the incidence of some cancers. Medical experts say this nutrient also plays a role in good vision, healthy skin, a strong immune system, and bone and teeth development.

Pumpkin is also a good-tasting source of dietary fiber. One-third cup pumpkin contains three grams of fiber. A full third of the pumpkins solids in a can of pumpkin is dietary fiber, which health experts say is vital to good health—and is often deficient in American diets.

The American Medical Association and other health organizations recommend including several servings of fiber-rich foods every day, since it is believed that a healthful diet requires 10-25 grams of fiber per day to maintain normal functioning of the intestinal tract. Other proven benefits of fiber include moderating blood cholesterol levels and actually reducing cholesterol in those with high levels, and moderating the rise in blood sugar following a meal.

To increase your intake of dietary fiber, try the following tasty pumpkin ideas:

•Add 2 tablespoons pumpkin per serving to hot oatmeal. Heat with water before cooking oatmeal. Serve with brown sugar. Or, sprinkle with cinnamon-sugar.

•Thicken soups, sauces, beans, and chili. Combine 1/4 to 1/2 cup pumpkin to baked beans, barbecue beans, or chili. Heat as directed.

•To improve glazing consistency of barbecue sauce on beef, pork, or poultry, add 1/2 cup pumpkin to a 15-16 ounce bottle of barbecue sauce.

•Even a sweet tooth can be boosted with additional nutrients and fiber: In small saucepan, combine contents of one packet (approximately 3 ounces) butterscotch and pie filling mix, 2 cups milk, and 1/2 cup pumpkin. Cook as directed on package.

•Add 1/2 cup pumpkin to liquid ingredients called for on package of spice cake mix. Bake as directed. Or, add 1/4 cup to the liquid ingredients of your favorite gingerbread mix (14-ounce size). Bake as directed.

•For rich and nutritious breads and cereals: Add 1/4 cup pumpkin to liquid ingredients called for in biscuit recipe (10 to 12 biscuits) on box of variety baking mix.

•Prepare your favorite pancake mix. Follow directions using 2 cup proportion dry mix, plus 1/2 cup pumpkin, 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon, 1/4 teaspoon ground allspice, egg and liquid ingredients called for on package directions. Cook as directed. Note: If batter is too thick, add 1 to 2 tablespoons of milk or water to achieve pouring consistency.

After you try some of these

Students from Byram County, New Jersey learn the importance of getting enough calcium through milk and dairy products at the Jefferson Lakes Day Camp. Campers are participating in a milk and cookies relay, trying not to spill the milk or drop a cookie. The team with the most milk at the end of the race won. The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. taught the children that by consuming the most milk on a daily basis and by reaching their recommended daily allowance of calcium, they too will win in the end, with stronger, healthier bones.

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Oh, nuts.

It's that time of the year, you know—nuts. Walnuts, hickory nuts, acorns. As these fruits of the hardwoods mature, they begin dropping to the ground, littering woodlot floors and sending squirrels in a made frenzy of harvest and planting.

Yes, planting. The reality of what squirrels do with the stuff they hustle about, gathering, became apparent in the lawn this past summer. Every mowing lopped off baby corn stalks, sprouting from the kernels buried in the lawn last winter by the squirrels. If we could train these rodents, we could do away with our cornplanter.

This winter, I'd hoped to give the squirrels some planting diversity—as well as a further varied diet. I'd like to share some pumpkin seeds with our furry rodents, and anticipate where we might find pumpkin stalks next year. If I get any pumpkins at all.

Actually, there are plenty in the patch. We watch them nearly every day, willing them to turn golden before frost. For while our local growers and markets seems to have matured pumpkins, most of ours are still green as grass and merrily pushing out yellow blossoms.

"Those pumpkins will still be blooming at Christmas," jokes The Farmer.

It's my fault.

When the cantaloupe and melon seeds were sprouting in the greenhouse in April, the pumpkin seeds should have been right beside them. Instead, along about early June, I suddenly remembered the seeds in small glass jars on a refrigerator shelf—past years' accumulation saved from assorted types of pumpkins and squash. It was time to do something with them.

So into the selected site they went, a steep-banked, no-man's-land between the old barn and the dairy barn. It's as unlikely a spot for a pumpkin patch as you could want, but is rich in unused soil composed mainly of well-rotted manure, accounting for the annual crop of super-weeds. One summer while our daughter was in 4-H gardening club, she stuck a few pumpkin seeds there to grow. One vine climbed completely in through an open window and brought forth a lovely neck pumpkin, which matured hanging on the inside of the dairy barn.

With all the rain, cloudiness and coolness of early summer, this year's already-late pumpkin patch was slow to develop. Then the heat and humidity of late July took over and we could barely outrun the vines' growth.

Pumpkin stalks have since threaded themselves up the outer-opening windows of the dairy barn and crept toward the roof. One is twisted around a window frame and dangles a large neck pumpkin three feet above the ground.

Late August, an ornery yearling heifer spent a couple of days demolishing the far end of the patch on her everyday forays outside the pen. She broke loose at least one fat, green pumpkin, maybe more. Fact is, the leaves are so thick in the patch that it's hard to tell; a second crop of leaves has regrown where she stomped them down.

Every day when we put the cows in for milking, I eyeball the patch to try to spot orange through the canopy of green. There are a few almost-orange ones. And several may-turn-orange-if-the-weather-holds ones. Plus many not-a-ghost-of-a-change infant pumpkins which the frost will finish. And, before Christmas, I'd betcha.

Guess the squirrels will have to be content with their usual winter diet, minus many pumpkin seeds.

Oh, nuts.

Ground Beef's Varied Tastes

Meatballs on the grill? If you like meatballs, you'll love the great flavor that charcoal grilling gives them, and they're a delicious addition to your grilling repertoire.

Threaded onto skewers and brushed with barbecue sauce during grilling, meatballs are flavorful and delicious.

As with any ground beef mixture, keep these tips in mind when preparing the meatballs to ensure moist results.

- Mix ingredients lightly but thoroughly; over mixing can result in tough meatballs.

- Shape gently; don't press and pat too much or a compact, dry texture could result.

- Make sure meatballs are uniform in size so they cook evenly.

- Cook to medium doneness — just until no longer pink in the center.

SAUCY MEATBALLS

3 pounds ground beef
2 cups quick oats
2 eggs
1 can evaporated milk

½ teaspoon pepper
2 teaspoons chili powder
1 small onion, chopped

Mix together all ingredients thoroughly. Shape into small balls. Place balls one-inch apart in roast pan. Mix sauce ingredients and pour over meatballs.

Sauce:

2 cups ketchup
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon liquid smoke
Cover and bake 30 minutes at 350 degrees. Bake uncovered at 350 degrees for 10 minutes.

Great Recipes From Great Gardeners

Do gardeners make the best cooks?

They do, some believe, because they grow food, love to experiment, and fine-tune recipes until they come up with a culinary masterpiece.

If you have any doubts, try "Great Recipes from Great Gardeners," compiled by The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

The 272-page hardback with 500 recipes, 100 gardening and garnishing ideas is the result of the Society's Harvest Show.

Every year at the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society's Harvest Show, visitors and competitors clamor for recipes of the prize-winning baked goods and home-grown garden bounty.

Harvest Show chairpersons Sandy Manthorpe and Sally Graham compiled recipes submitted from members and friends of the Society.

A nice feature to the cookbook is that each recipe includes a nutritional analysis so you can keep track of exactly how much protein, fat, and fiber you eat.

Proceeds benefit The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society's Philadelphia Green Program, which works with more than 700 community groups who help green up vacant lots, plant trees, and rejuvenate city spaces into vibrant green ones.

Vibrant color photographs scattered throughout the cookbook capture the fresh beauty of fruits, flowers, and vegetables.

For more information, call (215) 625-8250.

To order "Great Recipes From Great Gardeners," send a check for $22.26 to Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, 325 Walnut St., Philadelphia, PA 19106.

Here are a few recipes from the cookbook.

BRAISED LENTILS

Chosen as one of the country's best recipes, this is featured in "America's Best Recipes...A 1995 Hometown Collection," published by Oxmoore House Inc.

6 slices bacon, chopped
½ cup chopped onion
1 carrot, scraped and chopped
3 cups chicken broth
1½ cups dried lentils
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar

2 tablespoons butter
1 bay leaf
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Cook bacon in a large skillet until crisp; remove bacon, reserving 2 tablespoons drippings in skillet. Set bacon aside. Cook onion and carrot in drippings in skillet over medium-high heat, stirring constantly, until vegetables are tender. Stir in chicken broth, lentils, white wine vinegar, butter, and bay leaf; bring to a boil. Cover, reduce heat and simmer 1 hour. Remove and discard bay leaf. Stir in salt and pepper; sprinkle with bacon. Serve immediately. Yield: 4 servings.

It's important to use a skillet with a tight-fitting lid when braising the lentils. It will keep the liquid from evaporating during the lengthy cooking time.

The cover and photographs throughout the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society Cookbook integrates gardening and food.

ADVANCED CHIMNEY TECHNOLOGY

SAFER: CHIMTEK is designed to withstand severe chimney fires without breaking or transmitting high temperatures to adjoining combustible materials.

LESS CREOSOTE: Wood smoke contains moisture (H₂O). When the smoke comes into contact with a surface under approx. 250 degrees F the water will condense to a liquid. This liquid combined with other products in wood smoke will result in creosote. Creosote can be very dangerous when it ignites. The inside of a CHIMTEK chimney stays much warmer and greatly reduces the amount of creosote formation. In many cases CHIMTEK chimneys are completely clean after years of use.

IMPROVES STOVE PERFORMANCE: The draft produced by a chimney is what pulls oxygen into the fire for combustion. The three main factors affecting draft are the chimney's height, size and temperature. CHIMTEK contains a great amount of a very special insulating material that is not affected by moisture saturation and will not seattle or deteriorate. Poor draft will result in poor combustion. Poor combustion will create more smoke. Smoke is wasted fuel. Newere EPA certified stoves are especially dependent on proper draft to perform properly.

A SURE SOLUTION TO MASONRY CHIMNEY PROBLEMS:

Outer casing of chimney; made of brick, stone, block, or other suitable masonry material.

CHIMTEK INNER LINER:

- Made of volcanic pumice and high-temperature refractory cements.
- Round shape provides even temperatures inside flue, and contributes to efficient flow of smoke and flue gases.
- Highly resistant to thermal shock.
- Even if cracks should occur, the round shape and Chimtek Secondary Liner prevent pieces from falling into chimney.
- The volcanic pumice in Chimtek liners adds considerable insulating value.

CHIMTEK SECONDARY LINER:

- Provides exceptional insulation to make chimney more efficient and reduce heat transfer to combustible materials.
- Provides structural support for inner liner.
- Will not absorb moisture or creosote.

Divide mixture into 12 equal portions. Form each portion around a ripe olive. Alternately thread 3 meatballs and 2 zucchini pieces onto each skewer.

Lightly grease unheated grid. Place meatball kabobs on grid over medium coals.

Grill 12 to 15 minutes or until no longer pink, turning and brushing occasionally with barbecue sauce during last 5 minutes of grilling. Add a cherry tomato to the end of each skewer after cooking. Makes 4 servings.

QUESTION — Nancy Price, Jarrettsville, would like a recipe for fruit sauce such as they serve with ham at Horn and Horn Restaurant. She has tried other recipes but none is as good as Horn and Horn's.

QUESTION — Dick Taylor, Allentown, N.J., would like a recipe for hot pepper sauce using lime juice and carrots as opposed to the traditional method of using vinegar and tomatoes. He writes that lime juice enhances the pepper flavor more than vinegar.

QUESTION — Dee Crowder, Gettysburg, is looking for a recipe similar to Rotel or Chi-Chi's Tomato and Green Chilies.

QUESTION — Sue Werner, Lebanon, would like a recipe for alfalfa jelly. She writes that her family tasted it at the Farm Show. Although she felt like she was eating grass, her son loved it.

ANSWER — Barbara Messinger, Thomasville, wanted to know how to make a pumpkin roll with cream cheese filling. Thanks to Gloria Sweigart, Manheim; Mrs. Elliot Myers, Ottsville; Jami Glick, Lewistown; and others for sending recipes.

Pumpkin Roll

- 3 eggs
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup pumpkin
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 cup flour
- 2 teaspoons cinnamon
- 2 teaspoons ginger
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup chopped nuts (optional)

Beat eggs 5 minutes or until a light lemony color. Add pumpkin and lemon juice and blend well. Sift remaining ingredients except nuts and fold into pumpkin mixture. Blend until smooth.

Spread batter into jelly roll pan (15 1/2 x 10 1/2 x 1-inch) lined with waxed paper and grease the paper. Top batter with nuts if used.

Bake at 375 degrees for 15 minutes. Cool. Invert onto a clean towel that has been sprinkled slightly with confectioners sugar. Peel waxed paper from cake immediately. Carefully roll cake in towel from narrow end into a jelly roll shape. Cool completely. When cake is cool, carefully unroll cake and spread with filling. Roll again and chill or freeze until ready to serve. Serves 8 to 10.

Filling:

- 1 cup confectioners' sugar
- 6 ounces softened cream cheese
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla

ANSWER — Pat Ellingson, Millers, Md., wanted a recipe for pickled peppers. Thanks to Susan Stahr, Emporium, for sending a recipe.

Pickled Whole Peppers

- 3 pounds (3-5-inch) green or yellow peppers
- 3 cups white distilled vinegar
- 1 cup water
- 3 tablespoons granulated sugar
- 1 tablespoon pickling salt
- 4 cloves garlic

Wash peppers. Cut 2 to 4 small slits in each pepper. Blanch the peppers in boiling water for 3 minutes. Immediately cool in ice water. Drain well. Lightly flatten peppers with a wooden spoon. In a 3-quart saucepan, combine vinegar and remaining ingredients except garlic. Bring to a boil over medium-high heat. Boil for 5 minutes. Place one clove of garlic in each hot pint jar. Firmly pack peppers into jars, leaving 1/2-inch headspace. Immediately pour hot vinegar mixture over peppers, leaving 1/2-inch headspace. Carefully run a non-metallic utensil down inside of jars to remove trapped air bubbles. Wipe jar tops and threads clean. Place hot lids on jars and screw bands on firmly. Process in boiling water canner for 10 minutes. Makes about 4-5 pints.

growth provides the best show induced by pinching between your thumb and forefinger. Besides being hardy and requiring little care, other than pinching, they come in many flower forms like a daisy eye, halo-type or pom-pom, and in many colors like coral-red, white, yellow, rust, pink and lavender. When plants grown in the garden reach a height of 6 to 8 inches (early summer) remove 3/4 inch of each shoot. This will cause side branching. When these side branches become 4 to 5 inches long, again remove the top 3/4 inch. This will make the plant compact.

Vigorous varieties may need a third pinching. Most compact, cushion type mums may be pinched as late as mid-July.

This versatile plant has many uses around the home. The taller varieties are excellent for cut flowers, while medium and short varieties make nice pot plants for inside or on porches, terraces and decks. You can use short or cushion mums effectively in mass plantings or borders.

The simplest way to obtain new plants is to divide old clumps. Do this in the early spring before the shoots begin rapid growth. Dig clumps and break off the shoots, leaving a mass of roots on each shoot.

Mums can live for several years in one location in warm climates without having to be moved.

However, you may have more attractive flowers if you replace them with new plants after two or three years.

You may want to add a little fertilizer, maybe even a little water and winter protection, but that's about all the care the hardy chrysanthemum needs.

Leaf disease will be less troublesome if the foliage is kept dry this time of year especially during the night. So water plants early in the morning to allow ample time for them to dry before nightfall.

KILE Kids Reveal Winning Secrets

LOU ANN GOOD

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)

While the animals are competing in the show ring at Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) held in the Farm Show Arena in Harrisburg, kids are competing in tractor pulls, agri-kid olympics, sack races, wheelbarrow races, horseshoe pitch, hog calling, and other events.

Several participants have practiced for the competition just as thoroughly as their parents have prepared the show animals for this annual event.

"I've been practicing for a year," Ronnie Lee Ferguson after he claimed first prize in the tractor pull.

Last year, Ronnie, from Mercer County, claimed a third place in the same competition. He's convinced that pulling his brother around in a wagon in the barn is the reason for his success.

But some of the kids who won in their division attributed their success to other reasons.

Christine Benchoff of Bessamer said that she jumps on a trampoline to develop muscle for the tractor pull.

"Running is the secret," said Johnny Hochstetler of Ohio. He lives on a horse farm in Ohio and each year accompanies his mother to KILE. She operates a Western stand called "The Way West."

At home Johnny has his own race horse. He enjoys riding, but said he wants to be an accountant when he grows up and maybe race horses on the side.

Corey Waltersdorf of Red Lion and Josh Howard of Duncannon said the secret to winning the tractor pull is to keep the wheels straight.

Corey's brother, five-year-old Chad was delighted to hear his brother's secret. He said, "I didn't know it before but now I know how to win too."

Ten-year-old Travis Forrey from Red Lion said it was his first time to compete in a tractor pull and he won first place in his division. "You must use your muscles the best you can," he said. "I developed mine on my sheep farm."

The tractor pull was sponsored by Evergreen Tractor. Agri-Olympics was sponsored by Lebanon Valley Bank.

In addition to planned competition, a petting barnyard was available throughout the day. Animals of Distinction featured dog tricks that fascinated people of all ages. Some kids like Nathan Tice and Brandon Winebark dressed in fashionable wool outfits and led their primped and lovely sheep in the lead line competition.

For some children, it was just fun to spend time with their animals. Some helped prepared them for shows, some showed them, and some walked around admiring all the livestock.

In the 10-year-old division Margaux Firestone of Lebanon listens as Travis Forrey of Red Lion tells his secret for winning the tractor pull, "Use your muscles the best you can."

"I've been practicing for a year," said Ronnie Lee Ferguson after he claimed first prize in the tractor pull.

These kids show off their ribbons, from left, James Tyler Yost, 4; Andy Matlock, 5; Chad Waltersdorf, 5; Corey Waltersdorf, 8; Marie Yost, 8, and Jill Matlock, 7.

Four-year-old Jackie Abell likes to help her parents care for Roxanne, an undefeated cow calf champion. Jackie is the daughter of Daniel Abell and Sharon Preston of Warren Center.

KILE Kids Reveal

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, October 14, 1988-B11

Fourth Graders Learn About Commodities

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent
FREDERICK, Md.—How many kernels of corn on an average ear?

An estimated 800.

Know how much a bushel of corn weighs?

One bushel of corn weighs 56 pounds—about as much as a fourth grade student.

How much water is needed to grow corn?

It takes 25 gallons of water to grow just one ear of corn!

What is most of the corn we grow used for?

The number one use for corn is livestock feed.

Frederick and Hagerstown fourth graders learned the answers to these questions and other fascinating facts recently during their field day at the Agricultural Experiment Station's Western Maryland Research and Education Center (WMREC).

"Kids Growing With Grains," the award-winning program established by the Cooperative Extension Service and WMREC, hosted 200 students from Frederick city and Hagerstown at the research farm. Bester, Winter Street, South Frederick, and Waverly Elementary Schools participated in this year's program. The students come from urban areas where their exposure to agriculture is often very limited; many have never seen a pig or sheep or calf. They were there to learn about grain production and consumption, and how important agriculture is in their lives.

In 1994, "Kids Growing With Grains" won a national award from Monsanto. The National Association of Home Economics recognized the program for its innovation in dealing with food quality and safety. And it will be presented at the Ag in the classroom national meeting in Dallas in October. Project coordinators have also been invited to present the program to Congress members and their staff in McLean, Va. The program was developed by the College of Agriculture; by Maxine Casey, Cassandra Corridon, Mary Ellen Waltemire, Kay Derr, Kristi Wolfensberger, and Don Schwartz of the Cooperative Extension Service; and by the Agricultural Experiment Station's Francis "Frank" Allnutt. A grant from Maryland Grain Producer's Utilization Board helped establish the program. Farm Bureaus from Frederick and Washington counties pay for the busses that transport the children, and the Washington County Farm Bureau Women's Committee actively helps out with the lunches for the day.

Hands-on learning stations at the field day gave the youngsters an opportunity to experience agriculture up close, in a fun and friendly way. The children and their chaperons, divided into groups of 50, rotated through grain planting, animal consumption, human nutrition, and unusual uses of grain centers. Activities ranged from cooking to the introduction of farm animals in pens.

At the planting station, Agricultural Experiment Station's Frank Allnutt explained planting and growing grain crops. Wagon loads of fourth graders toured the rolling farm fields, getting an introduction to Best Management Practices. Barley, corn, wheat, oats, and soybeans are grown on the more than 300 acres devoted to field crops on the research farm. The groups then had an opportunity to learn the functions and costs of various pieces of equipment using scale replicas. "It is a real eye opener for the children, they never imagined how much money is involved in farming," said Allnutt.

Non-food and unusual uses of grains were highlighted in another station. Crayons, ink and paper, paint, paste, and diapers are just a few of the products produced using corn crops, the youngsters learned. Here they saw how biodegradable bags made from corn starch could help the environment by decomposing 20 times faster than plastic bags. They learned about ethanol, an alcohol made from corn, which reduces carbon monoxide pollution in the air. They could also sample grits and make popcorn balls under the supervision of county home economists.

the importance of grains in our diet. Students could help make whole wheat pancakes, and could create trail mix using cereal made from the same kinds of grains grown on the farm. Home economists explained how eating whole grains is an excellent way to increase the complex carbohydrates in their daily diets.

Washington County 4-H club members were on hand to do some teaching at the animal consumption exhibit. Katie Herbst, a 13-year-old member of the Ringgold Dairy club, brought a holstein heifers to the field day. Katie explained to the city dwellers how grain is converted into milk. A lamb belonging to 13-year-old Jesse Rohrer of the Washington County Lamb and Sheep club, and some piglets were included in the sample group of farm animals. Also helping with the animals was 12-year-old Ashleigh Reeder, of the Benevola 4-H club.

Sharpsburg farmer Bill Poffenberger brought a 850-pound hereford heifer from his beef herd to round out the livestock tent. The 4th graders were given a basic understanding of what is involved in milk and meat production on the farm.

"If they leave here with the assumption it takes a lot of effort, then it's worth it," said Washington County Ag Agent Don Schwartz. "The children's concept of what is involved in production is often extremely limited. They've been removed from the farm so long, even their parents and grandparents may not know what's involved."

After a bag lunch, with milk donated by MD-VA Cooperative, and help provided by the Washington County Farm Bureau Women's Committee, the nine year olds went to a display of commodity bins. Here they could create a decorative jar filled with the different grains grown on the farm to take home. These jars were taken home as a reminder of their day on the farm, for the children to share with their families. Buried up to their elbows in the grains, it was clear the city youth were enjoying "Kids Growing With Grains."

Trail Mix

2 cups corn cereal*
2 cups wheat cereal
2 cups oat cereal
1 cup pretzels
½ cup raisins

Fourth graders from Mrs. Mallin's class are up to their elbows in commodities. Enjoying the grain field-day activities are, from foreground back: Michael Starner, Ronnie Lathey, Travis Robinson, and Michael Williams.

Mix cereals and pretzels in pan and bake for 45 minutes at 250°F, stirring every 15 minutes. Cook; store in airtight container.

*Flavoring for cereal can be added before baking. Mix 3 tablespoons melted margarine, 2 teaspoons season salt and 3 teaspoons Worcestershire Sauce. Pour over one kind of cereal and mix well.

Pancakes

1 egg
1¼ cup milk
½ teaspoon baking soda
1¼ cups flour
1 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons soft shortening
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt (optional)

Beat ingredients together until smooth. For healthier pancakes, whole wheat flour can be used instead of regular flour.

For extra convenience, use prepared pancake mix and add 1 cup whole wheat flour to batter. Fruits such as apples and blueberries can be added for variety as well.

Pizza Flavor Mix

¼ cup Parmesan cheese
3 tablespoons dry spaghetti sauce mix
2 teaspoons basil
2 teaspoons oregano
2 teaspoons garlic powder
8 cups Kellogg's Crispix cereal
4 cups pretzel nuggets
3 tablespoons vegetable oil

Combine Parmesan cheese, spaghetti sauce mix, and spices. Set aside.

In a 2 gallon storage bag, combine Kellogg's Crispix cereal and pretzel nuggets. Pour oil over cereal mixture, tossing gently to coat. Add Parmesan cheese mixture to bag, tossing gently until cereal mixture is thoroughly coated. Store in airtight container.

YIELD: 12 cups

Frank Allnutt of the Agricultural Experiment Station explains what a disc does using a scale replica. The children were introduced to Best Management Practices implemented on the research farm, where more than 300 acres of field crops are grown.

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, October 14, 1995-815

This October it is 25 years that I have written an article each week for Lancaster Farming newspaper. Added up that would be 1300 separate items. Sometimes it is easy to write and other times it takes a while to get started.

Over the years I've shared my family's life with the readers. When I started in 1970, my two oldest were in college, my two youngest were in elementary school, and the two others were in high school.

It was a busy time in my life and there were many things to write about as our children were quite active in school, church and 4-H. My parents had just moved off the farm as all of their farm buildings were torn down to make way for a new Route 222. The next decade was busy as I tried to care for both my children and my parents. I'm sure many people find themselves in this same predicament.

When the editor introduced me to the readers in the October 17, 1970 issue he said, "Ida's Notebook is written by a farm wife who has been faithfully keeping a diary since she was 16 years old. The column is informal enough to make room for both the big events and the little details of farm life which together make farming what it is."

In that same issue of 1970, I counted 10 public sales. Today there are nearer 110—and I should know as I call the auctioneers each Monday morning to get a Sale Report. Another difference is the size of the newspaper and also the subscription price which was two dollars a year in 1970.

I have shared births, weddings, and deaths with the readers. Some of them in turn have written to me or phoned to say "keep writing." I'm hoping I can do that for a while longer.

And that means that there's less chance of crop damage. Eliminate Tiresome Mosquito Problems

CHARLES PITTS
Penn State Extension
Entomologist

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Most people think only of flies as problems around dairy facilities during the summer months but there is one problem that is present that we don't normally think of. This is the many species of mosquitoes that feed on both man and animals.

People can feel the bites when they are outside, but the mosquitoes that feed at night are not plainly visible when they feed on animals.

For practical purposes, the numerous species of mosquitoes that we will have to deal with can be grouped on the basis of similarities in their larval habitat preferences, which generally reflect other important aspects of their ecology.

A convenient grouping of species includes: (1) The permanent pool group (2) the transient water group, (3) the flood water group, and (4) the artificial container and tree-hole group.

Permanent Pool

Mosquito species belonging to the permanent pool group are generally found in fresh bodies of quiet water exposed to sunlight and containing an abundance of surface vegetation at the air-water-plant interface.

Typical habitats are shallow margins of ponds, lakes and small impoundments, the main characteristic being a degree of permanency. Such habitats are particularly suitable for Anopheles, Culex spp., and Mansonia spp.

The mosquito species inhabiting permanent waters deposit their eggs on the water surface, singly in the case of Anopheles, and in rafts in the case of Culex and Mansonia.

Oviposition egg laying sites are sheltered from wave action and are always in the presence of vegetation suitable for larval protection or attachment.

Breeding is generally continuous in these species with several generations per year. The effective flight range of permanent pool species are relatively short, usually within a mile or so of the breeding area.

Transient Water

The members of the transient water group are mostly Culiseta spp., plus some Culex. Their habits are similar to those in the permanent pool group, but they seem to be more associated with pools of a temporary nature as opposed to species with an affinity for ponds and lakes.

Typical sites are roadside ditches, barrow pits, canals, ground pools, clogged streams, irrigated land etc. Flight range similar to permanent water group.

Floodwater Group

The floodwater species of mosquitoes of the genera Aedes and Psorophora deposit their eggs singly on damp soil in grassy or woodland depressions or along vegetated shorelines that are intermittently flooded. Salt marsh mosquitoes are also included in this group.

When the eggs are flooded after a period of desiccation, they will hatch if conditions are favorable. Otherwise the eggs may remain dormant and viable on the soil until a more favorable inundation.

Typically, large numbers are produced at a hatching; larval development is uniform and adults may appear as early as six days after flooding.

Some species produce a single brood, while many produce multiple generations per year. These species are particularly troublesome as pests and some characteristically fly long distances.

Artificial Container, Tree-Hole Group

Characteristic of the artificial container and tree-hole group are members of the genus Aedes, with specialized habits.

The eggs are laid singly on the inside wall of the container, at or above the waterline, and hatch when inundated after a period of desiccation. Over wintering is in the egg stage and there are multiple broods.

The oviposition sites include natural cavities containing water, such as tree holes but frequently are found in artificial containers with leafy sediment or decaying leaves.

Control

After having read about the different breeding sites, it becomes clear that the farmer alone can make an impact on mosquito populations in their area.

Things a dairy producer can do are as follows:

1. Make sure there is no standing water on their premises that will breed mosquitoes. The main breeding site on dairy farms are in old tires. If you are still using tires on your silage pits you should think of using half tires that have holes punched in the sidewall so there is no possibility of holding water.

These half tires are easy to throw on the pit and can be stacked easily when not in use. These half tires can be purchased from Mahantango Ent. Inc., Liverpool.

2. Schedule outdoor events during daylight hours. Mosquitoes are the most active during sun-down hours.

3. Mosquitoes do not like high winds, so fans directed on outdoor activities may give some relief.

4. Fog in the evening. Fogging during the day does not give good mosquito kill because the mosquitoes must be flying to pick up enough pesticides to receive a lethal dose.

5. Use insect repellent when out of doors.

6. If not too hot, wear long sleeves to give protection from bites.

7. No chemical treatment of dairy animals is necessary if proper sanitation measures are taken by removing breeding sites.

Importance Of Mosquito Control

The importance of mosquito control in the Northeast is that Culiseta melanura mosquitoes are the vectors of Eastern Equine Encephalitis and Aedes spp. are vectors of dog heart worm.

The number of cases of these diseases per year is highly variable but the potential for outbreak numbers is always there. Large numbers of mosquitoes can be extremely annoying to both man and animals.

Cook's Question Corner

ANSWER — Barbara Messinger, Thomasville, wanted to know how to make and can grape juice. Thanks to a Cumberland reader, who writes that an easy way to make and can grape juice is to use a steamer called Mehu Maya, which is simple to use and makes hardly any mess. All you need to do is wash and pluck the grapes. Put them in the top part of the steamer. In about an hour, they should be finished. The juice collects in the middle section that has a small hose attached to it. Hold your jars under the hose and fill. They should seal as the grape juice is hot. The steamer also has a bottom part (resembling a double boiler) that needs water in it at all times.

The steamer works for many kinds of fruits and vegetables and for steaming meats. Full instructions are included with the steamers, which may be purchased at Country Housewares in Leola, Good's Store in East Earl and Weaver's Clothing Store in Fivepointville.

Thanks to A. Moyer, Bernville, who sent her recipe for grape juice.

Grape Juice

Pick ripe purple or white grapes. May use a combination. Wash grapes. Pull off the stems and place in kettle. Cover completely with water. Bring to a boil. Pour through cheesecloth or put through a sieve. Add 1 cup sugar (scant) to each quart of juice. Put measured juice and sugar back in kettle again and heat very hot. Put into clean jars, cap and seal. This makes a concentrate to which an equal part of water is added before serving.

Thanks to Mrs. Ray Keeny, New Freedom, for sending an unusual recipe that uses the complete grape by making juice and sauce.

Grape Juice

Put water on grapes to within 1/2 -inch from top. Boil and strain. To each quart of juice, add 1 pint water and 3/4 -1 cup sugar. Bring to a rolling boil. Pour into sterilized jars. Seal and turn upside down for 30 minutes or more. Or, process 15 minutes in hot water bath.

For sauce, after the juice drains off the pulp, put the pulp through the food mill then sweeten to taste. This makes a delicious fruit, which I call grape sauce. It is eaten by itself as a fruit, on top of ice cream, mixed in cereal or as a spread on bread.

Thanks to Tina Forry, Palmyra, for sending an easy recipe and she says the best she has ever used.

Grape Juice

- 1 cup grapes, washed per jar
- 1/2 cup sugar per jar

Fill desired amount of jars with appropriate amounts of grapes and sugar. Fill each jar halfway with boiling water. Stir. Fill each jar. Process in boiling water bath. Let set for a week or two before drinking.

ANSWER — Louise Graybeal, Renick, W.V., wanted a recipe for breakfast bars. Thanks to Sarah Beth Spade for sending one for apple streudel and to an anonymous reader for a turnover recipe.

Apple Streudel

- 1 package yellow cake mix
- 1/2 cup butter

Mix together sour cream and egg. Spread over apples. Sprinkle on topping. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

Quick Cherry Turnovers

- 8-ounce tube refrigerated crescent rolls
- 1 cup cherry pie filling
- 1/2 cup confectioners' sugar
- 1 to 2 tablespoons milk

Unroll dough and separate into eight triangles; make four squares by pressing the seams of two triangles together and rolling into shape. Place on an ungreased baking sheet. Spoon 1/4 cup pie filling in one corner of each square. Fold to make triangles; pinch to seal. Bake at 375 degrees for 10-12 minutes or until golden. Mix sugar and milk; drizzle over turnovers. Serve warm. Note: any pie filling may be used.

ANSWER — A Blain reader wanted a recipe for sweet potato bread or rolls. Thanks to Sarah Beth Spade for sending a recipe.

Good quality apple juice. For best results, buy fresh juice. Refrigerate juice for 24 hours after it has been poured off clear liquid and strained through a paper coffee filter. To hot pack, heat juice in a sterilized pint, quart, or half-gallon headspace. Adjust lids and process.

juice. Thanks to Sarah Beth Spade for sending a recipe.

ANSWER — Mrs. Guy Sponsiler, Gettysburg, wanted a recipe that tastes like the Tastykake Butterscotch Krimpets with icing. Thanks to Sarah Clark, Breezewood, who sent the recipe. She writes that they were first sold in 1927, and now approximately 6 million are sold every week.

Cake:
4 egg whites
16-ounce box golden pound cake mix
1/2 cup water
Frosting:
1/2 cup butterscotch morsels
1/2 cup butter, softened
1 1/2 cups confectioners' sugar
Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Beat the egg white until thick.
Blend the egg whites with the cake mix and water. Pour the batter into a greased 9x12-inch baking pan. Bake for 30 minutes or until the top is golden brown and a toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean. Cool on wire rack.
For frosting: Melt the butterscotch morsels in a microwave oven on high for 45 seconds. If you don't have a microwave oven, use a double broiler over hot not boiling water.

Mix the butter with the melted butterscotch. Add the confec-tioners' sugar. Blend with a mixer until the frosting has a smooth consistency.

Spread the frosting on top of the cooled pound cake. Cut the cake into nine rows.

Make two cuts lengthwise. This should divide the cake into 27 equal pieces. Makes 27 cakes.

ANSWER — Sarah Beth Spade, Richfield, wrote that since 1970, she has had an applehead doll displayed in a gallon jar with a tight lid. The apple has darkened but no bugs have appeared. This is another solution for Anna Newswanger, Narvon, who was concerned about appleheads becoming buggy.

ANSWER — Bill Fletcher, Trumansburg, N.Y., wanted to know how to blend kerosene in outdoor torches to control bugs and also hide the strong kerosene smell. Thanks to an anonymous reader who wrote that he should use citronella-scented lamp oil, which is not as strong as kerosene but costs a bit more. It is available at chain department stores or buy citronella oil at the drug store. Add about 1/2 teaspoon citronella oil to one pint kerosene. Add more if a stronger scent is needed.

ANSWER — Helen Hagenbuch, Danville, requested the words to the following poem. Thanks to A.M. Rohrer, East Berlin; the Zook children in Myerstown; Mrs. Earl Kimble, Bedford; and others for sending the words.

September

By Helen Hunt Jackson

The golden rod is yellow,
The corn is turning brown,
The trees in apple orchards,
With fruit are bending down.
The gentian's bluest fringes
Are curling in the sun;
In dusky pods the milkweed
Its hidden silk has spun.
The sedges flaunt their harvest
In every meadow-nook;
And asters by the brookside
Make asters in the brook.
From dewy lanes at morning
The grapes' sweet odors rise;
At noon the roads all flutter
With yellow butterflies.
By all these lovely tokens
September days are here,
With summer's best of weather,
And autumn's best of cheer.

ABSOLUTE AUCTION

Sat., Oct. 21st, 1995

AT 12:00 NOON ON PREMISES
MINIMUM BID OF $250,000.00

Large Victorian home in Historic District

The Pearce house is the best surviving Queen Anne style home in Chestertown, and has been restored. It was built for Judge James Pearce, son of the mid-century U.S. Senator, by H.M. Stuart, one of the towns premier craftsmen. Notable are the banded exterior walls and ornaments of plaster and terra cotta. The porches, balustrades and irregular dormers, as well as the pink slate and detailed color scheme of the home, makes this a fine example of a period house with all its fabric intact.

LOCATION: 103 S.W. Maple Avenue, Chestertown, Maryland.

REDUCE DAIRY FEED COSTS

Faced with reduced "milk prices" and increased operating expenses, dairymen are looking for reasonable ways to reduce feed costs. To help meet this need, Pennfield is introducing a new line of complete feeds that are specifically formulated to provide a well fortified feed with an economical balance of proteins and energy. New "Value Tech" feeds use a balanced amount of NPN (Non Protein Nitrogen) as a source of rumen soluble protein.

PREPARE FOR HEAT STRESS NOW

Professor And Head
Dept. of Ag &
Bio Engineering

Now is the time to begin preparations for heat stress relief for your birds.

Why now? You're probably saying, "The miserable hot weather of this past summer is now history and we have seven or eight months before we have summer weather again" or you may ask, "Now is the most pleasant time of the year with respect to the weather, why do I need to worry about heat stress relief?"

I repeat, now is the time to prepare for heat stress relief! If you don't do it now, when will you? Do it now while the experiences of this past summer are fresh in your memory.

If you wait, you will be preoccupied with plowing snow and thawing frozen pipes within several months. Then you are going to be deep into preparing income taxes and then working around the clock at planting season. The next thing you know, summer is here and your birds are suffering from heat stress.

Now is the time! The goal of any plan to reduce heat stress effects is to provide an environment conducive to high productive efficiency for the birds. When under a high degree of heat stress, a chicken will reduce feed intake and expend energy to maintain constant body temperature. The expended energy would otherwise be available for useful production.

As you know, other problems associated with heat stress in addition to a decline in rate of gain are declines in feed efficiency and in reproductive efficiency and an increase in disease susceptibility. Of course, there is always a serious threat of mortality if the heat stressing conditions are not abated.

Before investing lots of dollars in an expensive fan-and-pad evaporative cooling system, there are many less costly approaches to consider for reducing the damaging effects of heat stress.

Closely examine your ventilation system. Ventilation involves removing air from inside the poultry house and replacing it with outside air. The ventilation may be natural (caused by wind and temperature forces) or mechanical (accomplished by using fans). The operating efficiency of a ventilation fan can be reduced 30-50 percent by the buildup of dust on fan blades or by shutters that do not freely operate.

Regardless of how well a ventilation system has been designed and installed, the system will not function properly without maintenance and care. When a ventilation system is not operating properly, the results can be pockets of stagnant air, high utility expenses, reduced life and reliability of ventilation equipment, and high repair bills.

Maybe your ventilation system, even when operating at peak performance, is not adequate for your poultry house. Now is the time to develop design modifications for your ventilation system so that the changes can be completed before next May or June.

Discuss the requirements for your desired ventilation systems with a reputable equipment supplier. Ask your poultry friends about the improvements they have made to their ventilation systems and learn from their successes and failures.

You may be interested in using a system involving misting nozzles or foggers to increase evaporative cooling within your poultry house. The requirement for any misting system to work properly is to have the ventilation system properly designed, installed, and maintained. Therefore, it is important to focus upon appropriate improvements in your ventilation system before considering a fogging system. Again, consult with a reputable supplier and other poultry producers to get the necessary specifications for a misting system.

Lastly, don't forget about the building itself. If you are relying upon natural ventilation, it is important to have sufficient open areas in the side and end walls. You may want to consider movable panels that can be removed in warm periods and then replaced during cold periods in order to save energy. Of course, the use of retractable curtain systems offers many potential benefits for poultry producers that need to be considered.

As you think about building modifications, you cannot think only about the summer heat stress relief, but you must also consider the energy requirements associated with heating in the wintertime.

Now is the time to prepare for heat stress relief for your birds. If you don't do it now, it most likely will not be done by the time we experience hot, humid weather again next June.

Limousin Foundation Offers Gestation Length EPDs

ENGLEWOOD, Colo.— Cattlemen will find a new tool to use for Limousin selection when they open the breed's Fall '95 Genetic Evaluation Manual. The North American Limousin Foundation (NALF) has established expected progeny differences (EPDs) for gestation length.

Measured in days, gestation length EPDs allow cattlemen to select for shorter gestation length and the benefits that go along with it: namely, slightly increased rebreeding performance due to longer post-partum intervals, some decrease in birth weight which equates to more calving ease, especially in first-calf heifers, and heavier actual weaning weights from older calves.

Along with this new EPD, cattlemen will find the latest Limousin Genetic Evaluation Manual one of the most comprehensive to date, including carcass EPDs and a listing of the breed's Focus Dams, females that have distinguished themselves through production and rebreeding performance.

"With these comprehensive descriptions of genetic differences, breeders have important tools to produce problem-free cattle," said Dr. Kent Andersen, NALF director of research and education.

In addition to the manual, cattlemen can also request IBM compatible Sire Selector software which gives them the sire and young sire listing on disk with the ability to sort for specific EPD ranges and accuracies by trait, as well as color and polled status.

To request a free manual, or to order the Sire Selector software, contact NALF at (303) 220-1693.

Growers Prosecuted

ject to a review referendum every five years, it is a democratic institution that represents the wishes of the majority of growers who participated in the referendums.

The Vegetable Marketing and Research Program has spent more than $125,000 over the past seven years on dozens of research projects, including major integrated pest management (IPM) research projects on sweet corn and tomatoes. Both of these projects are intended to provide growers with information that enables them to apply pesticides when the disease or insect pressure is greatest instead of on a regular schedule. Some years this decreases the number of sprays applied, thereby decreasing the grower's cost while other years it will increase the number of sprays applied thereby increasing the grower's crop quality. Either way, the grower benefits. This year the program has gone a step further by mailing this IPM information to growers across the state on a weekly basis.

The program has also worked hard at promoting Pennsylvania vegetables. It has created colorful point-of-purchase materials for growers who retail their produce. Each year the program has provided newspapers across the state with news releases on Pennsylvania vegetables throughout the harvest season. This year the program teamed up with the American Cancer Society, the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Philadelphia Eagles to urge consumers to eat at least five servings of vegetables and fruits each day during National 5-A-Day Week in September.

Pa. FFA Judging Teams Win First Place

SPRINGFIELD, Mass.— Members of Pennsylvania's state winning teams competed recently at the 1995 Eastern States Exposition FFA day contest.

For the first time since 1987, Pennsylvania won the coveted Sweepstakes Award given to the state with the best overall team score. Pennsylvania competed against teams from 15 other eastern states, including Ohio, Maryland, New York, New Jersey, Virginia, West Virginia, Delaware, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Maine, and Vermont.

State's First Solar Dairy Barn At New Bolton Center

KENNETT SQUARE (Chester Co.) — The University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine has completed plans and signed contracts to start construction of a 200-head solar dairy barn for teaching and research at New Bolton Center in Chester County.

The Allam Dairy Facility solar dairy barn will be a first in Pennsylvania. This type of barn, usually built in the Northern states and Canada, has proved to be a big boon to the dairy industry.

A solar barn is energy efficient, naturally bright, and easy to keep dry, all essential conditions for productive cows. Also, it is cost effective in terms of manpower and building expense.

The Allam Dairy Facility solar dairy barn is named after emeritus dean, Dr. Mark W. Allam, Class of '32. Dr. Allam was interim dean of the School of Veterinary Medicine from 1952-1953. In 1953 he was appointed dean and remained in that capacity until 1973. Dr. Allam was instrumental in the development of New Bolton Center and still takes a great interest in it.

The new Allam Dairy Facility at New Bolton Center will serve as a living laboratory for the School of Veterinary Medicine.

"It is a commercial dairy with modifications for extensive and intensive research. We recognized that in order for us to do relevant research we needed the environmental setting that emulates the real world," said Dr. William Chalupa, professor of nutrition at the School's Center for Animal Health and Productivity (CAHP).

"It's like having an on-site patient for us to study," said Dr. David Galligan, associate professor of animal health economics at the school. "In this case our patient is the farm. We now can explore ways to keep the dairy farm healthy and productive while keeping costs at a minimum through the use of a living model."

The new facility will serve as a research and teaching site in such fields as epidemiology and preventative medicine, nutrition, reproduction, infectious and chronic diseases, and dairy cattle health economics.

In addition, the new Allam Dairy Facility will provide the region a resource with potential for commercial applications and enhance the teaching environment for veterinary and graduate students interested in the medical and managerial aspects of dairying.

"In order to adapt to our climate we've made design modifications to reduce heat build-up," Dr. Galligan said.

"The shell of the building is pre-manufactured as a solar agriculture building, in essence, a plastic greenhouse." In the summer, the sides of the barn can be rolled to facilitate cross ventilation.

The facility consists of an administration area that includes a room with view of the double-10 herringbone milking parlor; four sections of 40 free stalls where cows can lie down; and, a space for 48 comfort stalls or traditional tie stalls.

A commodity building and bunker silos will be located on the north side of the barn.

"The layout of the free stall area enables us to care for and milk approximately 160 cows with relatively little labor," Galligan said. Through the use of electronic gates the cows can be herded to the milking parlor and milked requiring the labor of only one person.

The tie stall area accommodates 48 cows which are tied up at feed bins in a traditional dairy farm fashion. This set-up will be used primarily for nutritional studies. Each cow can be fed a different mix and monitored by computer. The tie stall area of the barn can be converted to a free stall-style barn, if needed.

Manure from the entire barn is deposited into an 8-month holding tank and is periodically and strategically spread onto fields which reduces the need for chemical fertilizer, cutting the overall farm cost.

The new dairy facility is made possible by a grant from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and through the generosity of the following: American Cyanamid Company, Princeton, N.J.; The Bedford County Farmers Association, Bedford; Church and Dwight Company Inc., Princeton, N.J.; Mr. Emerson C. Frey, Millersville; and, Mr. W.B. Dixon Stroud, Media.

Penn's Center for Animal Health and Productivity at New Bolton Center, the school's large animal facility, was established in 1986 to implement teaching, research and service programs directed toward the improvement of health and productivity in food animal herds and flocks. The focus of CAHP is improved production through the maintenance of physical and economic health in the whole animal population.

Weed Species May Improve Golf Greens

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)—On the lush turf of golf greens, the presence of a weed is about as jarring as a sneeze in church. Then why is a researcher in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences working on adapting a species of bluegrass that is classified as a noxious weed for use on golf greens?

According to David Huff, assistant professor of turfgrass breeding and genetics, certain strains of the bluegrass species Poa annua exhibit such desirable traits as upright growth, high shoot density, and high tolerance to the extremely low mowing heights most top golf courses use on their greens.

Creeping bentgrass is grown on most northern golf courses. Huff explains that, as its name implies, bentgrass grows flat rather than straight up. The flattened grass can unpredictably influence the rolling path of a putted golf ball—a condition professional golfers call "grain." Creeping bentgrass can be groomed to grow straight, usually by raking the greens and dressing the surface with sand.

Poa annua establishes itself in patches on greens planted with creeping bentgrass and has been a pariah to greenskeepers for decades. "Typically, soil will become exposed from balls hitting the green or from spike marks, allowing the Poa to take hold," Huff explains.

Over a period of years, the bluegrass strain expands, usually out-competing the bentgrass. Huff said golf courses that are more than 80 years old often have greens made up exclusively of Poa annua. "If the greens are mowed very short—5/32 to 3/32 of an inch—creeping bentgrass becomes very stressed at those heights and the Poa does very well," he says.

"The variety of Poa annua reminds me of breeds of dogs," Huff says. "It's all one species, yet there are a lot of different strains—some good and some bad."

Over the past year, Huff has been collecting samples of Poa annua from golf courses across the country, primarily from courses more than 100 years old. From these samples, he hopes to produce a breed of Poa annua that can be developed into a commercial product.

"I see this product being used for renovations of older courses where the greens are already comprised of Poa annua strains," Huff said. "Of course, some course superintendents may prefer to plant Poa annua on newer greens and I think it produces a much superior putting surface."

Once Huff has selected several varieties for breeding, he hopes to produce a cultivar that is resistant to heat and disease. He estimates his work could produce a commercial seed in about five years. "At the very least we'll be able to develop a variety that is uniform in color, growth rate and texture," he said.

As part of his research, Huff is constructing an experimental golf green to be planted entirely with Poa annua. The green, located near Beaver Stadium, will allow him to observe how the grass performs under realistic conditions. He even plans to go out and putt on the green. All in the interest of science, of course.

"We have to evaluate the turf quality and its putting surface to see which varieties will be best suited for use on greens," Huff said. "For years scientists worked to try to get rid of Poa annua. We will still have to convince people that what we are doing is a good thing, but once they compare creeping bentgrass and the selected strains of Poa annua, the advantages of Poa annua should be clear."

Mycogen, Ciba Seeds Expand Agreement

BLOOMINGTON, Ill.—Mycogen Corporation (Nasdaq: MYCO) and Ciba Seeds have signed a letter of intent to expand the relationship the two companies entered into in 1993 to develop insect-resistant hybrid seed corn products.

Under the expanded agreement, Mycogen would grant Ciba Seeds a license to develop and sell seed corn products under Mycogen's U.S. and foreign patents covering genetically engineering plants to produce Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) proteins that give them built-in resistance to insects. Mycogen would receive royalties or access for breeding purposes to corn plants genetically engineered to resist certain corn pests.

Mycogen and Ciba also agreed to collaborate closely on intellectual property issues to assert and strengthen their proprietary position for seed corn products with Bt-based insect resistance.

On August 8, 1995, Mycogen and Ciba each received U.S. Environmental Protection Agency approval to begin marketing the first products of their two-year collaboration, seed corn with Bt-based resistance to European corn borer, a pest that costs U.S. farmers as much as $1 billion a year in lost yields. This protection also reduces or eliminates the need for conventional corn borer insecticide applications.

Swine Receiving Station Opens Nov. 1

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)—Walter M. Dunlap & Sons, Inc. has announced a new marketing service for Pennsylvania pork producers.

Beginning Nov. 1, Walter M. Dunlap & Sons Inc. will be operating a Lancaster Stockyards swine receiving station every Wednesday (except during the week of Thanksgiving) so that swine producers have a new swine marketing opportunity. Producers, therefore, can market animals on Mondays through the auction or Wednesdays through the receiving station.

Marlin Becker, having served as White Oak Mills' hog dispatcher and marketing agent for 12 years, will be joining Walter M. Dunlap & Sons Inc. as manager of their hog division effective Oct. 16 to oversee this new Lancaster Stockyards receiving station. A life-long Lancaster County resident, Marlin has more than 14 years of experience as a swine producer, fieldman, and marketing agent.

Dekalb Honors Dealers

DEKALB, Ill.—Dekalb Genetics Corporation recently honored several outstanding dealers for sales achievements.

James Landis of Milton, Pa., was honored as Outstanding Dealer of the Year within his sales district. Vernon Umble of Christiana, Pa. was recognized as Outstanding New Dealer of the Year within his sales district.

Also, several product champions were announced for sales in their districts. They are Earl Tindall of Lawrenceville, N.J., corn sales; Robert Stoltzfus of Cochranville, Pa., alfalfa sales; and Marvin Kaylor, Annville, Pa., soybean sales.

Several were also recently honored as Winner's Circle members. They include Steve Adams of Ray Adams Farms, Sunbury, Pa., for the second time; George Coleman, Elmer, N.J., for the 10th time; Elmer Hertzler, Narvon, Pa., for the second time; and Richard Long, Pottstown, Pa.

The Outstanding Dealer of the Year Award is "presented annually at our district sales kickoff meeting," said John Wysolmerski, district sales manager.

The Product Champion Award is "presented annually to the dealer with outstanding sales in each product line for his district," said the sales manager. "It recognizes a superior effort to provide farmers with service and a mix of hybrids tailored to each customer's individual needs and farming practices."

Adams has been a Dekalb dealer for 21 years and is among approximately 1,300 Winner's Circle members to be recognized nationwide, along with Coleman, who also has been a dealer for 21 years. Hertzler has been a Dekalb dealer for 17 years.

The award is based on service to customers, sales volume, and increases in seed orders.

Companies To Develop Insect-Resistant Crops

PRESCOTT, Wis.—Mycogen Corporation and its Mycogen Plant Sciences seed group announced that it has signed a letter of intent for a major technology and development collaboration with Pioneer Hi-Bred International Inc. to develop transgenic crops with built-in insect resistance. The transaction is subject to completion of definitive agreements.

Pioneer is the world's largest seed company and maintains the industry's most extensive agricultural genetics and plant breeding programs. Mycogen is a leader in plant transformation and Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) gene technology for insect resistance in plants. Both companies market seed for corn, soybean, sunflower, sorghum, and other major crops.

The collaboration will focus on transforming corn, soybean, sunflowers, canola, sorghum, and other crops with Bt genes that cause the plants to produce natural proteins that protect them against insect damage. Bt-based insect resistance reduces or eliminates the need for chemical insecticides.

Under the agreement, Pioneer will provide $51 million-$21 million in research and development funding and $30 million to purchase three million shares of Mycogen common stock. Pioneer will also devote extensive research and development staff and resources to the joint product development programs. Pioneer will receive non-exclusive rights to all Bt crop protection technology and associated technologies owned or developed by Mycogen during the next 10 years.

Both companies will be able to market their own products resulting from the collaboration, royalty-free, in North America.

Pioneer will pay a royalty to Mycogen for jointly developed products that it markets outside North America. Mycogen will have exclusive worldwide rights to license jointly developed technologies to third parties. No proprietary seed lines will be shared by the companies.

Farmers Will Invest In Weed Control

PHILADELPHIA—The median cost of herbicides purchased by soybean growers to raise a crop is between $23 and $25 per acre.

Total Research Corporation questioned more than 1,000 soybean farmers and determined that midwestern soybean growers, in general, pay more for weed control than southern soybean growers but the median difference was only one to two dollars per acre.

The Authority Research Survey of farmers showed that 48 percent of 339 upper midwest farmers paid $21 to $30 per acre for their herbicides whereas 50 percent of 273 lower midwest farmers paid that much.

Thirty-eight percent of 403 southern farmers paid $20 less per acre for their herbicides. No application costs were included in the cost analysis.

"Even though southern soybean farmers generally paid less for weed control, a large group of southern soybean farmers had to pay more than $31 per acre for herbicides," said Nick Phillips, FMC venture manager who authorized the Authority Research Survey. "Of this group, 14 percent had to pay over $35 per acre because of one troublesome weed—sicklepod. Since most herbicides do not control this weed at low rates, because it grows multiple flushes during the growing season and because it is highly competitive with soybeans, farmers have to expend extra effort and money to control sicklepod."

Frederick Posts Champion Sale Results

KAREN BUTLER

Maryland Correspondent

FREDERICK, Md. — The results of Frederick County 4-H youth's hard work went through the sale ring at the showcase of champions sale. The sale was held in conjunction with the 133rd Great Frederick Fair at the Frederick County Fairgrounds.

Prices were strong, and the community came out in force to show its support for the county's youth. "I don't think anybody could ask for anything better, especially for the kind of year it's been," said Ed Wachter, chairman of the sale committee. One hundred eighty-five youth participated in the event.

Hogs brought an average of $407.01 by the head, or $1.70 per pound. Kathy Gordon, swine superintendent, was delighted with this year's sale. "Our show this year is one of the best we've ever had," she said. Weight ranges on the pigs were from 210 to 260 pounds.

Eric Holtz's grand champion Hampshire/Yorkshire cross brought $6.50 per pound from buyer F & M Bank. The pig was then donated back to be resold at the Frederick Livestock sale with the proceeds going to the 4-H Camp Center. Eric, the 15-year-old son of Vaughn Holtz and Kathryn English, is a three-year member of the Eyler Valley 4-H club. "She just filled out real nice, and I'm real proud of her," he said of his 243-pound gilt.

Reserve grand champion pig was a 260-pound Hampshire gilt raised by Daryl Hood. Daryl is a member of the Johnsville 4-H Club. His pig was purchased by Tom Walker of Horseland, USA for $4.35 a pound.

The Wolfe Pig, owned by County 4-H Queen Kim Stup, was a special fundraiser for the 4-H Livestock judging team. Wolfe Industrial Auctioneers, Inc. of Gettysburg, sponsored the sale of the pig. Kim was guaranteed $1.80 per pound for her Yorkshire/Hampshire cross gilt. The 235 pounder was purchased by high bidder Bob Dinsmore of Ceresville Ford-New Holland for $3 per pound.

Forty seven market lambs brought an average of $411.15 a head, or $3.56 per pound.

Seventeen-year-old Rebecca Portner's last year as a member of the Lewistown Mountain View club ended with a bang. Rebecca had the grand champion market lamb at the sale, a 126-pound Suffolk wether. A bidding war drove the price of Rebecca's lamb up to $30.50 per pound, surpassing last year's top price of $30 per pound.

Generous purchasers were Remsburg Paving, and Jimmy Remsburg. Rebecca is the daughter of Robert and Robin Portner of Foxville. Her mother gives credit to Rebecca's sister, Megan, for "doing most of the legwork" with the sheep.

Reserve grand champion market lamb was a 107-pound wether owned by Jennifer Biser. The lamb brought $21.50 from Giant Food, Inc.

The special fundraising lamb was the Miller lamb, sponsored by the Jim Miller family of Sabillasville. Tymon Hevner, the 4-H King, was guaranteed $2.50 per pound. When the bidding was over, his 105-pound mainly Suffolk wether brought $20 per pound from a group of buyers: Tire Mart, Concrete General, Potomac Tile and Carpet, Robt. Garst Paint Center, Yarnell Wastler, Hutzell's Appraisal, Bob Biser, Paul Hefner, Inc., Offutt, Horman, Burdette, and Frey, P.A., Liberty Road Seafood, Lease and Lease Auctioneers, and Harold Martz and Son Landscaping. Proceeds from the sale went to the Therapeutic Riding Program, and then the lamb was donated back to be sold again, with proceeds to benefit the Livestock Judging Team. "It was the best lamb I've ever had," said Tymon.

Eighty-four steers commanded an average of $1,563.98 per head, or $1.31 per pound.

The grand champion steer was a 1,235-pound Angus/Limosin cross named "Streak" belonging to Sarah Wiles. The 16-year-old daughter of Tom and Myralee Wiles said she "worked hard, and it paid off in the end." Sarah is a member of the Tri-Valley Livestock club. Middletown Ford purchased Sarah's steer for $6.25 per pound.

Reserve grand champion steer at the sale belonged to 12-year-old Jennifer Butler. "Panda," a four-way cross of Angus, Maine-Anjou, Simmental, and Hereford, weighed in at 1,260 pounds. He was purchased at the Piedmont sale. Panda was purchased by Giant Food, Inc. for $3 per pound. Jennifer is the daughter of Mark and Marie Butler.

The fundraising steer for the evening was Allan Axline's

1,255-pound crossbred, sponsored by E.W. Moser. The steer fetched $8.60 per pound, and was purchased by a syndicate including Concrete General, FCNB Bank, Frederick Underwriters, Bidle Bros., and Joe Biser.

Eric Holtz had the grand champion pig, a 230-pound Hampshire/Yorkshire cross. She brought $6.50 per pound from generous buyer F&M Bank. Eric is the son of Vaughn Holtz and Kathryn English.

The sale of Rebecca Portner's grand champion Suffolk wether sparked a bidding war that resulted in a top price of $30.50 per pound. Purchasers of the lamb were Remsburg Paving and Jimmy Remsburg. From left, 4-H King Tymon Hevner, Jimmy Remsburg, Jamie Remsburg of Remsburg Paving, 4-H Queen Kimberly Stup, and Rebecca Portner.

THINK CONCRETE!!

When planning your storage for high-moisture shelled corn. The light-colored concrete walls protect your valuable grain from the heat like we experienced this summer.

Listen to what these farmers from Virginia say about their switch to a poured concrete silo for their corn storage:

"Even during the hottest summer in our memory, the shelled corn from our poured concrete silo has kept its bright yellow color and has not heated.

We have the best Hi-Moisture shelled corn ever."
Signed: Keith Wilson, Paul Wilson, Gerald Garber; Cave View Farms, Inc., Weyers Cave Va.

Side with Alumax ALU-TUFF Steel

When you put up a building, you expect it to be attractive and to last. A building constructed with ALU-TUFF will meet those expectations. That's because ALU-TUFF is made using top-quality materials, super-tough protective coatings, and a unique rib design that's both functional and attractive.

Years from now when other buildings are starting to show their age, your building will still look good.

• A STRONG PROFILE

High 3/4-inch ribs on nine-inch centers give ALU-TUFF exceptionally high spanning properties for its weight and thickness, while stiffening ribs in flat areas prevent rippling.

• MADE TO LAST

To keep Alu-Tuff working hard and looking good for years to come, we protect it with an oven-cured system of four different coatings.

• A GREAT LOOKING PANEL

You don't have to sacrifice good looks to get a tough steel panel.

• MORE QUALITY FEATURES

Each ALU-TUFF sheet is 38 inches wide to provide 36-inch coverage. That's wide enough to minimize the number of side laps, yet narrow enough to be easy to handle.

Agriculture Moves on EBY Bodies

M.H. Eby custom-builds aluminum truck-bodies for the agri-transportation market. Nobody offers more sizes and options in:

- LIVESTOCK BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of heights and widths. -
- GRAIN BODIES - Lengths to 24'; landscape and general purpose dumps to 12'.
- FLATBED BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of 5 widths.

For greater payload capacity, Eby's aluminum design is equal in strength to steel and up to 40% lighter. Our corrosion-resistant components never need painting. That means minimum maintenance, improved appearance and higher resale value.

Eby products have superior standard features. And we offer custom options for virtually any application. Agriculture is your business- building bodies to haul it is ours.

Bucks County Holds 4-H Swine Show, Sale

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — The Bucks County 4-H Swine Show and Sale was recently held at the Perkiomenville Auction Facility.

The 4-H Swine Show and Sale is the culmination of a program that is designed to help youth develop an understanding of feeding, fitting, and showing a market animal. Youth who participate also have to keep accurate records and learn about the pork industry.

The support of the community, private industry and the entire 4-Hers family is essential in providing the 4-H members with a successful project experience. The judge for the 1995 show was Clyde Myers, agriculture extension agent, Berks County.

This year's swine program was unique in that 14 members from downtown Warminster each raised a pig for the sale. The "urbanites" did a terrific job with the reserve champion hog coming from their barn.

The Bucks County champion hog was shown by David Lachman, age 11, from Doylestown. David is an active member of the Unami 4-H Club. His prize winning pig weighed 250 pounds and was purchased by Hatfield Quality Meats for $2.45 per pound.

The reserve champion hog was shown by Dennis Lipschutz of Warminster. Dennis is a first year swine project member from the Warminster Community 4-H Club. The reserve champion pig was purchased from the Delaware Valley College Livestock Barn. Dennis's 255-pound pig was purchased by Leidy's Inc. of Souder-ton for $1.75 per pound.

Andrew Crooke of New Hope, an active member of the Buckingham 4-H Club, received $1.95 per pound for his champion pair of hogs. The pair was purchased by Hatfield Quality Meats. The reserve champion pair was shown by Matt Gottschling of Perkasio and was purchased for $1.90 per pound by Hatfield Quality Meats.

Following is a list of show placings.

Lightweight: 1. Rasheed Denkins, 2. Matthew Crooke, 3. Meghan.
Light Medium Weight: 1. Troy Foster, 2. Mike Cirilo, 3. Nathan Crooke.
Heavy Medium Weight: 1. Leah Bernasky, 2. Martha Buhner, 3. Julie Barndt.

Ag Export Funds Available

ANNAPOLIS, Md.—The Maryland State Department of Agriculture and the Southern United States Trade Association (SUSTA) are accepting branded activity plans for the 1995 Market Promotion Program (MPP) reallocation.

SUSTA has approximately $1.648 million in MPP funds available during its FY-95 Reallocation. Funding is available for both small and non-small companies.

The Market Promotion Program assists U.S. companies in exporting their agricultural products by sharing the cost of marketing and promotional activities.

SUSTA's participation in the program enables southern producers of high value agricultural products to increase their sales worldwide. Participating companies are able to enter and develop markets which may be too costly to attempt without the matching funds. Eligible activities include advertising, production of promotional materials, trade shows, and in-store merchandising, to name a few.

Interested companies should request an information packet and application form by contacting the Maryland State Department of Agriculture, Marilyn Bassford, 50 Harry S. Truman Parkway, Annapolis, MD 21401, (410) 841-5773, fax (410) 841-5987. The state will forward a request for a packet to the SUSTA staff who will mail the entire MPP Branded Reallocation Manual to the applicant.

Andrew Crooke showed the champion pair of hogs.

Md. Names Associate Deans

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Dr. Thomas A. Fretz, dean of the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Maryland at College Park (UMCP), has announced two appointments to the college's administrative team, effective Aug. 1.

Dr. Marla McIntosh has been named associate dean for academic programs and Dr. J. Scott Angle has been chosen associate dean and associate director of the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Angle and McIntosh are professors in the college's Department of Agronomy. Both have been serving in their new positions on an acting basis. Their permanent appointments follow an exhaustive nationwide search and interviews with several highly qualified candidates.

McIntosh holds three degrees from the University of Illinois; a bachelor's and master's in forestry and a doctorate in agronomy. Since joining the UMCP faculty in 1979, she has written or co-authored two book chapters and 45 articles in refereed journals. Her research has concentrated on genetic resource conservation of crop plants and sludge application to forests.

McIntosh's dedication to work in the classroom as well as the laboratory has earned her several special awards, including the Outstanding Teaching Award from the Northeast Branch of the American Society of Agronomy, the Agriculture Alumni Teaching Excellence Award, and the title of distinguished scholar-teacher for the 1993-1994 school year.

Angle earned his bachelor's and master's degrees in agronomy from UMCP and his doctorate from the University of Missouri, Columbia. He joined the UMCP faculty in 1981 with primary teaching and research responsibilities in soil microbiology.

Angle has edited three books and authored or co-authored 75 technical papers and 12 book chapters. He is an international leader in assessing the health and environmental risks associated with the use of genetically engineered organisms, and has received numerous awards for his research contributions.

Angle is a fellow in the American Society of Agronomy and the Soil Science Society of America. In 1991 he was awarded a Fulbright Fellowship for a sabbatical at the Tothamsted Experiment Station in the United Kingdom.

JUMBO BALES

A Case International 8580 large rectangular baler makes JUMBO bales - up to 2,000 pounds.

Buy at Old Price Savings

It compresses hay equivalent to about 40 conventional bales into a single high-density package. The high-end capacity and performance of the 8580 means you can push these big bales through the machine all day - every day. That's a lot of hay!

And it's quality hay, too. The center-line design handles the crop gently to preserve nutritious leaves. The bales are uniformly shaped for efficient handling and shipping.

The 8580 also has a full list of standard features. Low-profile pickup, pre-packed chamber, massive gearbox, heavy-duty components throughout, electronic monitoring, double-tie knotters and low maintenance. And it's simple to operate. The Case International 8580 is a JUMBO value, too.

CASE

CASE IH 2100 Series Axial Flow Combines

DO IT!

WITH DEPENDABILITY

... Moving when the grain and weather conditions are fit: that is what the CASE IH Axial Flow combines do. And they are built tough to last. Many are running over 5,000 hours. How long will an Axial Flow last? We do not know yet.

WITH RELIABILITY

... Compared to conventional or other style Rotary combines, the Axial Flow puts more premium quality grain in the tank and leaves less grain in the field. Why else do most all growers of food quality corn own CASE IH Axial Flow Combines?

WITH COMFORT

... The new cab on the 2100 Series makes your long days seem shorter, because the controls you use most are on the HYDRO-PROPULSION Lever which is attached to the seat. You have less operator stress - therefore, more personal productivity per day.

WITH A COMBINE DEALER

... C. B. HOOBER & SON INC. HAS SPECIALIZED IN COMBINES SALES AND SERVICE SINCE THE AXIAL FLOW WAS INTRODUCED IN 1977. (7) HOOBER SERVICEMEN ARE FACTORY TRAINED TO WORK ON AXIAL FLOW COMBINES YEAR ROUND - NOT JUST DURING COMBINE SEASON. AND OUR MECHANICS SERVICE OVER 300 AXIAL FLOW COMBINES. CAN YOU GET THAT KIND OF SUPPORT ANYWHERE ELSE?

Consider a REAL Open-Top Mixer

REAL mixing with four large counter-rotating augers for fast, thorough blending of feeds. The large, flanged augers are designed specifically to evenly mix all ingredients. The mix is the same at the beginning, middle and end of feeding each batch.

REAL mixing-capacity numbers:
You can use more of the Patz Mixer's struck-level capacity for mixing than with a reel-type mixer.

REAL strength with heavy-gauge steel sides and 3/8-inch-thick bottoms for long service life.

REAL primary drive reduction with a planetary gearbox.

REAL hay shelf and notched augers as standard equipment.

REAL Patz financing at affordable rates.

Ask to see the video of the REAL Patz Mixer. Also, we will be glad to do an on-farm demonstration.

ON THE USE OF

PURINA DAIRY SUPPL-MINERALS

Suppl-Minerals were developed primarily to fit into any program where the dairy animals do not require much of our milking completes or concentrates; for example, in late lactation, during the dry period, or for the heifer.

Purina Minerals use only quality ingredients with high biological availability. They are more easily absorbed into the animal's system.

Purina Minerals are flavored with molasses or other palatability enhancers. That makes animals consume free-choice minerals as often as needed. Purina Minerals are formulated to provide the proper balance of major and minor minerals plus vitamins.

Directions: Blend into total mixed rations or limit-feed to lactating dairy animals to provide 2 to 4 ounces per head per day or as recommended by your Purina Representative.

Feed 4 to 5 ounces/head/day to dry cows and growing heifers not on a Purina Cornerstone[®] or Prepare[®] feeding program.

CORN TALK

Corn Talk, Lancaster Farming, Saturday, October 14, 1995

In Wake Of Drought, Wolfes Worry About Corn Test Weights

CENTRE HALL (Centre Co.) — Centre County corn grower Wade Wolfe is just beginning to pick corn, so he is not sure how much of an effect this year's late season drought will have on yields.

Both he and his father, Glenn Wolfe, say that in the 45 years the family has been on this farm, they have seen worse years than this.

So far the test weights are down, said Wade, because of low moisture, reducing the fullness of the kernels. The average test weight so far has been 52 pounds/bushel — it should be around 56 to avoid being docked when selling the corn.

Another problem this year is a big variation in kernel moisture. Wade said the monitor on his combine indicated a range of from 15 to 40 percent in one field with higher moisture levels in spots with deeper soil.

When the kernel moisture is higher or lower than what the combine is set for before harvesting, the kernels are broken up, cutting down yields and increasing spoilage in storage bins if moisture is too high.

Glenn estimates a 25-50 percent drop in corn yields this year, as the ears are half the normal length, and there are some barren stalks. Later corn varieties didn't pollinate, he said. Also, if they get high winds before the corn is harvested, the unusually tall stalks, which are brittle from the drought and are carrying the ears four feet off the ground, will go down.

Another harvesting problem resulted from sap leaving the stalks too quickly, which meant that a lot of corn cut for silage was too dry. Wade tried adding water to the silage as it was being unloaded, but that didn't work because the silage was so dry that they couldn't add water fast enough to do much good.

But there is some good news about this year's corn. Wade is pleased about the quality of the yellow coloration in the corn, Wade Wolfe, left, vice president of the Pennsylvania Corn Growers' Association, and his father Glenn Wolfe check the corn they have harvested so far this year for drought effects.

FROM ANOTHER
STRANGE YEAR

The 1995 growing season was, to say the least, a different corn growing experience than many of us have experienced in the recent past.

For many of us it was a learning experience which is what keeps this business interesting.

Let's examine a few of the challenges that occurred during the last half of the 1995 corn production season in Pennsylvania and discuss the lessons

Seed Treatments May Stem Problems Of 'Overwintering'

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Untreated seed and an unusually mild winter this year may have severely affected corn stand and possibly overall harvest, according to a Penn State researcher.

At this year's Weed Field Day held in July at the university's Southeast Research Laboratory in Landisville, corn plants showed evidence of a lack of seed treatment — problems with emergence in spots, corn height variability, and overall population decrease because of overwintering insects and disease.

According to Greg Roth, associate professor of agronomy at Penn State, the unevenness and spotty growth could be blamed on "a flush of soil critters due to the open and relatively warm winter we had." The uneven height could be a secondary symptom, he said.

Fields inspected throughout the state showed similar problems with brown discoloration in the root system from wireworms, seed corn infestation, and seed fungus.

All these problems could have been reduced with a "three-way" seedbox treatment, combining a fungicide, insecticide, and a chemical treatment to improve germination.

In one example, corn was planted at the research station on May 1. Corn emergence should have topped 21,000 plants per acre. However, only 15,000-16,000 plants emerged, said Roth, "a pretty significant drop in population."

Of the problems reported throughout the state, many were a result of the "second wave" of corn planted, in the May 1-May 10 timeframe. Not every field was affected. Nonemergent corn should not exceed 10 percent of the total planted. But in many cases, nonemergent totals approached 20 percent of total planted.

In some cases, Roth has seen fields drop down to 15,000 plants per acre or less. Some fields needed to be replanted.

"I don't have the complete answer," said Roth. "We're not sure what causes the problem."

Whatever the cause, Roth said that a number of growers that he visited do not routinely use a seedbox seed treatment. "That's probably a mistake," he said.

Researchers at Cornell have done more research than Penn State on the use of seed treatments, and "they find that the use of these 'three-way' products gives you the most broad-spectrum control" of problems.

Roth said that Penn State will inspect and monitor fields to see if there are some direct benefits to using the seedbox treatments. Cost equals about $2 per acre.

Control Stored Grain

Pests Using Fumigants

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The cheapest and safest method of controlling grain pests is prevention.

Fumigation should be considered only as an emergency treatment. Once grain is infested with insects, the quickest and most effective way to remedy the problem is usually with a fumigant.

All fumigants, however, are hazardous and must be handled with extreme caution. They all have a signal word "Danger" and skull and crossbones on the label and are restricted-use pesticides. As of December 1, 1985, only methyl bromide, chloropicrin, aluminum phosphide, and magnesium phosphide are available for use as grain fumigants. Fumigants or mixtures of fumigants containing ethylene dibromide, carbon tetrachloride, or carbon disulfide are no longer legal for grain fumigation.

The methods of application, dosages, temperature, moisture, exposure periods, and all precautions are listed on the label. Be certain to read and understand all directions before using any fumigant.

Remember:

- Fumigants are generally not fully effective at temperatures below 60 F.
- Aluminum phosphide is less likely to impair seed viability than are other fumigants. • Never use methyl bromide on any grain intended for seed use.

Doebler's Penna. Hybrids wishes to thank you for 60 years of seed success.

We have had the honor of selling seed corn to your fathers and many of your grandfathers over the past 60 years. Many of you currently represent the third and fourth generation of farmers in the East who purchase Doeblers Hybrids and Doeblers alfalfas with confidence for your farm operations. We take pride in the fact you have found that Doeblers represent the Eastern farm like no other seed company.

which attracts buyers' attention. Also, prices are up over a dollar a bushel from last year (up from $2.18 to $3.00-$3.25), which will make up for some of the yield loss and low test weights.

Also, the low moisture reduces time and money necessary to spend drying shelled corn. Although Wade puts up about 10,000 bushels of high moisture corn for his beef cattle, he sells the rest as dry shelled corn, primarily to Pennfield and Shoop feed companies. This year he estimates he will have 25,000-40,000 bushels to sell after harvesting 400 total acres, which includes corn cut for silage.

Yields of earlier varieties of corn (Wade plants Doeblers and Pioneer) which were cut before the drought for silage were "excellent." After the first of August, the corn dried out quickly and died much earlier than usual. Their farm suffered some drought last year also, being in a small area of the county that the rain kept missing while falling only a mile away.

Other Influences

The age-old farm problem of expenses going up while the government keeps prices down to provide cheap food for consumers continues. Wade figures not being able to spray weeds with atrazine will double his spraying costs. Some farmers in the State College area incur the wrath of neighbors who oppose the use of chemicals on crops, which the Wolfes fear may hinder their ability to use sprays, further reducing yields.

The Wolfes have been trying to work out an acceptable soil conservation plan with the ASCS for three years. Because they pasture their brood cows in fields of corn stalks after the corn has been picked, they don't want to put in strips, which would require too much money for fencing.

Also, one ASCS agent wants them to put in more no-till corn (right now they have one-third no-tilled, one-third chisel plowed, and one-third moldboard plowed). Wade believes the cost of more no-till equipment is prohibitive for him. Because no-till corn requires a higher soil temperature to do well, as he discovered last year with a "terrible" no-till crop, he has to wait until mid-May to plant it. Weed control for no-till corn is harder, necessitating the purchase of more increasingly expensive sprays.

Wade has doubts about marketing corn through futures contracts. "It's not all gravy," he said. After losing money on options the last two years, he questions whether contracts work.

Help On Horizon

Wade and Glenn Wolfe, Penn State agriculture graduates, monitor their crops closely for insect and weed problems. They rely on consultations with their suppliers for technical support as well as the seed companies.

To cut down on the need for chemicals, the Wolfes plan to increase their rotation of corn with wheat and hay. In addition to 400 acres of corn, they have 100 acres of soybeans, 200 acres of hay, 100 acres of wheat, and 200 acres of timothy and clover pasture. They have some fields in corn for two years and others in corn and soybeans for five years.

As they expand their beef operation, they need more hay and wheat, which they will rotate more often with the corn.

Another edge the Wolfes have is that they can reapportion how much corn to sell and how much to feed to beef cattle according to what the prices are in a given year.

Wade is encouraged by the present growth in the export market for corn. He blames a lack of competition among grain buyers for a drop in contract prices below Chicago Board of Trade levels by 20 to 25 cents. He believes that farmers may be better off with little or no governmental involvement in setting prices and other farm programs.

The Pennsylvania Corn Growers Association, of which Wade is the vice president, concentrates on bringing corn growers up to date on new techniques and developments at their annual conference. The association is also pushing for the corn checkoff program.

NFU Protests Assault On Ethanol

DENVER, Colo.—"The tax provision changes passed by the House Ways and Means Committee would be devastating for the U.S. ethanol industry," said National Farmers Union (NFU) President Leland Swenson in the letter to U.S. House Speaker Newt Gingrich. The letter was written on behalf of NFU's 293,000 farm and ranch families.

"Development of a commercial ethanol industry has strengthened corn prices by increasing demand. Five percent of last year's record corn crop went into ethanol production. This increased farm income from corn production by about 11 percent or $1.2 billion in 1994," wrote Swenson.

"Yet, farmers are only one sector of the U.S. economy that has benefitted from this relatively new industry. Ethanol processing and blending have provided needed jobs in many rural communities in the Midwest. The ethanol industry has created more than 40,000 U.S. jobs and generates $5.6 billion for the U.S. economy annually," continued Swenson in his letter to Gingrich.

The House Ways and Means Committee has proposed the following changes: 1) Repeal of the Treasury Department's ruling making ETBE eligible for the partial excise tax exemption; 2) Cap tax benefits of current ethanol manufacturers and deny tax incentives to new manufacturers; and 3) eliminate the excise tax exemption, require that marketers use only the blender's income tax credit and reduce this credit from 54 cents to 51 cents per gallon.

Swenson is also critical of the fact that the tax changes are being slipped into the House's budget reconciliation bill. "This is an issue that will have a significant impact on corn producers, rural communities, ethanol manufacturers and our nation's balance of trade. It certainly deserves public debate," said Swenson.

A recent report by the Government Accounting Office (GAO) projected a net loss to the U.S. Treasury of up to $6.3 billion over five years because of a drop in corn prices if the ethanol incentive program were eliminated.

"Severe crippling of the ethanol industry—the likely result of the proposed changes—would leave petroleum derivative MTBE as the only oxygenate available for Clear Air Act fuels," said Swenson. "This would increase the price of MTBE and escalate U.S. dependence on foreign oil."

When You Plant CFS Waxy Hybrids, You're Planting More Than Just Corn.

Facts prove that starch content is what makes corn the ideal animal feed. And that's what makes CFS Waxy Corn different from dent. CFS Waxy is 100% amylopectin starch...zero percent amylose. (Dent is 25% amylose).

Amylopectin starch is more digestible. That means CFS Waxy maintains no less than a 25% advantage over dent...in the feedlot or milking parlor.

On-farm tests show the average weight gain/feed efficiency in beef, sheep, swine and other animals fed waxy corn increased up to 10% over dent fed animals.

In dairy herds CFS Waxy increased butterfat, protein and milk production.

And, CFS waxy can be produced as a cash crop...often bringing premium prices when used for export.

Faster weight gain, more milk and flexibility...that's why CFS Waxy hybrids are more than just corn.

Penn State Examines Promises, Potential For Narrow-Row Corn

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.)
— Research on corn row widths could prove fruitful — literally — by increasing the amount of corn harvested per acre.

Now, only if the researchers could work out planting and harvesting challenges . . .

Potential benefits of using 15-inch rows instead of the standard 30-inch rows include an earlier canopy, better weed control, improved soil conservation, more nutrient uptake, and possibly higher yields, according to Greg Roth, associate professor of agronomy at Penn State.

At this year's Weed Field Day held at the Landisville Research Station, Roth spoke about the ongoing research at Penn State to study the potential of narrower corn row widths.

Penn State has put out "a number of simple trials at a number of locations" comprising four years of research, said Roth. There are 10-15 sites in the database and five locations.

"Results have been generally pretty promising," Roth told those who attended the Weed Field Day. Penn State has investigated two different systems, using 30-inch rows at a population of 27,000 plants per acre and 15-inch rows at a population of 34,000 plants per acre.

At this year's Ag Progress Days, displays showed some of the promising results of initial research. In 1993, yield response climbed to 7 percent. In 1994, researchers at Rockspring saw an 18 percent yield response.

At this year's Ag Progress Days, Steven Smith, Penn State research assistant, provided information on the narrow width corn rows. A demonstration plot showed 15-inch rows planted at a density of 34,000 plants per acre. The demonstration seedbed was planted May 10.

Smith said the biggest challenge facing growers is adjusting the right equipment and that, during planting and harvesting, the equipment moves slower than conventional 30-inch plantings.

Roth said the yield increases at Rockspring were "probably above normal and mostly due to the increase in population."

Researchers are looking at silage use of the narrower rows, which is being adopted readily in New York, according to Roth. One location in Quarryville, Lancaster County, showed a 3.5 percent overall increase, giving a very good, 30-ton silage yield.

A site in Lebanon showed a 1 percent increase, for 22 tons of silage.

Rockspring showed an 11 percent increase, for a 23-ton corn silage yield increase.

"Our early results are sort of saying there might be some room for this," said Roth.

Roth pointed out that the greatest potential may be for parts of northern Pennsylvania, where the corn remains short well into the season and canopies over later, and where it is more difficult to obtain good stands. These areas "might benefit more from the narrow rows than down here in the south-east," said Roth.

The researcher wants to see if his theory holds out — that as "we move north, we're probably going to see these narrow rows pay off more nicely."

The problems growers face include retooling equipment to plant and harvest narrow-row corn and working around the problems of applying pesticide and fertilizer products post-emergence.

Research at the USDA Beltsville, Md. laboratory has shown benefits with reducing herbicide rates with narrow row corn and improved weed control.

The potential for using narrow-row corn is "the kind of thing I want to take a good, long look at," said Roth. He told growers at the Weed Field Day, "When we make our decision about it, I'll keep you informed and hopefully you'll get behind us if it looks promising for some areas."

Watch For Serious Corn Stalk Lodging

COLUMBUS, Ohio—An Ohio State University agronomist cautions farmers to watch for serious corn stalk lodging problems at harvest because of the effects of the past growing season's weather and disease stresses.

Peter Thomison said drought and hot weather during the corn plant's grain-fill stage, combined with widespread late-season foliar disease damage, have increased the likelihood of serious stalk rot problems in many Ohio corn fields.

"Given these prospects, growers in some areas could incur significant grain losses if they delay field harvest to allow for natural drydown," Thomison said.

Healthy stalks require enough carbohydrates produced by photosynthesis to keep both pith cells and root cells alive during grain fill. However, photosynthetic activity was sharply reduced by either drought or heat from July through early September, and carbohydrate levels were insufficient for developing ears, in some cases. Stressed plants compensated by transferring carbohydrates to the ear, resulting in premature death of pith cells and root tissues. This predisposed plants to root infection and stalk rot fungi.

In addition to drought stress during grain fill, the past growing season was unfortunately favorable to the development of foliar diseases that weakened the stalks. The most important by far is gray leaf spot, while Stewart's bacterial blight was evident to a lesser degree. Second-generation European corn borers also injured stalks in some areas.

Other stresses that can increase the likelihood of stalk rot are tissue loss from hail damage, insect or chemical injury to the root system, high levels of nitrogen in relation to potassium in the soil, compacted or saturated soils restricting normal root growth, and high plant populations.

In most hybrids, stalk rot symptoms do not show up until shortly before the black layer stage, coinciding with physiological maturity. The main fungal pathogens causing stalk rot in Ohio are Gibberella, Colletotrichum (anthracnose) and sometimes Fusarium. It is often difficult to distinguish between stalk rots because two or more fungi may be involved.

Assessing a potential lodging problem is fairly simple because the deterioration of inner stalk tissues is a symptom common to all stalk rot. These tissues will easily compress when squeezed between the thumb and finger. Use this "squeeze test" to determine the extent of stalk rot throughout a field. Give the most damaged fields priority at harvest.

"This is not the year to allow corn to dry in the field to moisture levels of the low 20s or high teens before harvest to save on drying costs!" Thomison said.

Potential benefits of using 15-inch rows instead of the standard 30-inch rows include an earlier canopy, better weed control, improved soil conservation, more nutrient uptake, and possibly higher yields.

At this year's Ag Progress Days, Steven Smith, Penn State research assistant, provided information on the narrow width corn rows. A demonstration plot showed 15-inch rows planted at a density of 34,000 plants per acre. The demonstration seedbed was planted May 10.

Between The Rows

they brought with them.

In the middle of July, I took my vacation and left with some relatively good looking corn plots in the field. I had the expectation that all that stood between me and an excellent corn crop was a few good thunderstorms.

Unfortunately, they never came in for us. Rainfall in July totaled 1.1 inches at Rockspring and 0.8 inches in August. Not everyone experienced our July drought but most everyone got a taste of the dry weather and hot temperatures in August.

The Pennsylvania crop condition dropped from 83 percent good to excellent corn on July 30 to 40 percent good to excellent on Sept. 17. The USDA crop yield estimate for Pennsylvania dropped from 118 bushels/acre in early August to 106 bushels/acre in early September. This was the largest drop in yield during that period for any state in the country.

As there is with any bad situation, there are always some positives. This year the positives include the good corn price, the early harvest, the reduced drying costs, and the remarkable drought stress that some fields showed in the late season.

There were also areas who avoided the drought and will end up with the combination of high yields and good prices that everyone strives for.

The dry weather also provided us an opportunity to evaluate some practices, hybrids, and recommendations.

One recommendation that received a lot of attention was the use of the milkline as a guide for harvesting silage. Normally, when corn is harvested at half milkline we estimate that the whole plant moisture will be about 65 percent, but in past years we have noticed that this varies anywhere from about 58 percent to 70 percent.

This year I harvested several experiments where the whole plant moisture was less than 60 percent at half milkline. Consequently, the milkline method is not accurate enough to be used alone. Ideally, we should monitor the milkline development and start moisture testing just after it appears on the tip side of the kernel. This is particularly true if you are working with folks who have a fairly narrow range of moisture that they want in their silage.

Another interesting aspect related to silage has been the silage quality. The textbook often tells us that the feed value of drought-stunted corn is 80-90 percent of normal. In several of the past seasons, however, drought-stunted corn has tested considerably better than this.

For example, the droughts in 1991 and 1993 occurred early in the year and the plants were stunted so the ear-to-stover ratio was similar or higher than normal corn silage. We also tended to get some rain late in both of these seasons, which allowed the stunted plants to recover a bit. Several studies showed superior digestibility of this stunted corn silage compared to normal years because of a good grain to stover ratio, lower fiber levels, and also because of less lignification of the fiber.

In 1995, the drought came late in the season and was combined with high temperatures. Plant growth was relatively good and ear development was generally stunted somewhat. This made for a silage in some areas with less grain than normal and normal or high lignification levels. In addition, the high temperatures likely reduced the amount of sugars in the crop because of increased plant respiration. The end result has been some higher fiber, lower energy corn silage that will need more supplementation to maintain expected production levels.

One positive aspect of this year's crop is that much of it was harvested before kernels reached black layer and became too hard, so this should have a positive effect on silage quality.

Another observation from this season is how various fields withstood the dry conditions. In general, corn on the deeper soils, in crop rotations following sods or soybeans, and no-till corn appeared to tolerate the drought more than other corn. All of these observations were consistent with the textbook. One observation that was surprising was the productivity of some corn hybrids that received little summer rainfall.

Some of our plots at Rockspring this year have yielded 100 bushels/acre after exhibiting leaf rolling for at least 25 days. This is a testament to the drought tolerance of some of some of our new hybrids.

Our hybrid harvest trial data is not in yet but I expect there will be large differences in yield based on my observations so far. Drought tolerance is a trait we need to continue to be focused on in developing and selecting hybrids for this region.

Grain harvest has been moving well ahead of normal in many areas. The early maturity of the corn is due to the rapid accumulation of GDDs in the season and the excellent conditions for drydown. Early harvest is essential this year to hit the moisture targets for high moisture corn and to avoid the stalk lodging that may be prevalent later in the season because of increased corn borer pressure and thin stalks.

Given the kinds of weather extremes we have anymore, we may experience monsoons in November anyway.

Two issues you may want to monitor more closely this year are corn borer infestation and harvest losses. With the high temperatures that we had, we have some fields that have fairly high corn borer infestations. Corn borer infestation levels are not always apparent from the roadside or combine seat, although ear drop and broken stalks are a tip-off to the problem.

To assess the number of corn borers per plant, split the stalks and count the number of tunnels you find. Do this on 5-10 plants to get a good average for the field. Also look for corn borers in the ear and shank.

This winter, you'll hear a lot about corn borer resistant corn. This information will help you decide if a resistant hybrid has a place on your farm. Entomologists are estimating about 3-5 percent yield loss/borer/plant. Along with this, estimating yield losses, particularly with later harvested fields, would be a good idea. Count the number of kernels in a 10 square foot area. Every 20 kernels in this area represents 1 bushel/acre. If there are many ears on the ground, estimate the ear loss separately by counting the ears in 1/100th of an acre. Each 1/4 pound ear in this area or its equivalent represents one bushel per acre.

Corn borer and harvest loss information will be valuable in assessing the response to the new corn borer resistant hybrids that will be available soon.

Clinton Administration Reaffirms Commitment To Ethanol

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman voiced the Clinton Administration's strong opposition to a House Ways and Means Committee proposal to end the excise tax exemption for ethanol. According to National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) President Rod Gangwish, this proposal is the biggest threat the ethanol industry has ever seen.

The proposal as outlined by Committee Chairman Bill Archer (R-TX) in the Committee's budget reconciliation package would "cap ethanol production at current levels and would virtually guarantee that there would be no new investments in ethanol production," Glickman said. The provisions also would reverse a recent Department of the Treasury rule, which has facilitated the use of ethyl tertiary butyl ether (ETBE). It removes the primary excise tax exemption mechanism which will shutdown some existing operations.

According to Glickman, this congressional effort to reduce or repeal the exemption would have a devastating impact on the nation's corn farmers and effectively halt a period of unprecedented growth in the ethanol industry.

"As a result, ethanol production would decline by as much as 50 percent from current projections," Glickman said. The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that corn net farm income could decrease by $3.6 billion over the seven-year period FY 1996-2002, compared to current projections. On a state-by-state basis, that would mean decreases of $600 million each in Iowa and Illinois and $300 million or more in the states of Indiana, Minnesota and Nebraska.

Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Carol Browner also voiced support for ethanol, calling it "a vital part in reducing air pollution" in her agency's quest to give U.S. citizens clean air. Not only does ethanol reduce carbon dioxide emissions and smog, but Browner also said that renewable fuels such as ethanol combat global warming. In its support of ethanol, EPA has proposed the elimination of the oxygen cap on reformulated gasoline. The agency has also proposed model pump labeling so consumers can knowledgeably choose a renewable fuel, and has asked the National Academy of Sciences to review data on fuel certification so ethanol can be used in summer months.

The NCGA has worked closely with the Administration in its effort to increase the use of ethanol. "We all know how hard the battle has been to build an ethanol market. NCGA, its state associations and members have worked together to make that happen," Gangwish said. "Sixteen years ago there was no ethanol market, and today we produce and sell 1.4 billion gallons of ethanol from corn each year. That market is now at risk, and we appreciated the Administration's insistence that this proposal not become law."

NCGA is conducting a mailing campaign for its corn grower members to contact Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich. Their plea: that Gingrich and fellow legislators remove the proposal before final action is taken by the U.S. House of Representatives.

President's Message

Curt Rakestraw
President, PMCGA

1995 FARM BILL

Whether we participated in the government farm programs or not, the new farm bill will affect all of us in agriculture.

The National Corn Growers Association, The Wheat Grower, and The American Cotton Council have joined forces to lobby for a fair and equitable farm bill for American Agriculture.

Some of the changes being lobbied for are more flex acres so that farmers planting decisions can be more market oriented, with slightly higher commodity loan rates and keeping the target prices where they are now. By increasing the flex acres and raising commodity loan rates, deficiency payments should be cut enough to stay within the federal budget

In the recent past, many groups have criticized government agricultural programs as being too expensive. Now I'll give you some facts that contradict that statement. From 1986 to 1995, Agriculture support payments declined by 70 percent, from $26 billion to $8 billion. The Congressional Budget Office (CBO) projects C.C.C. spending will decline by 8 percent from $8.5 billion in fiscal year 1986 to $7.8 billion in fiscal year 2000 with no program changes. If all the other federal programs had taken the same level of cuts as agriculture, we would now have a substantial budget surplus. Farm programs represent less than 1 percent of the entire federal budget.

Not only is federal spending on agriculture down, but the percentage of disposable income that families spend on food is down. It takes only 10.3 percent of disposable income for an American family to buy food, while France, the next closes nation to us, takes 16 percent. Where on earth do any people have better quality food, more variety, or a safer food supply than in the United States?

As farmers we need to do a better job in communicating these facts to our urban neighbors. The next time your local newspaper runs an editorial unjustly criticizing farm programs, I would encourage you to respond with a letter to the editor.

In this issue of Corn Talk,

SINCE A PICTURE IS WORTH A THOUSAND WORDS, REMEMBER THIS:

The European Union (EU) increases overall farm support next year by 13 percent, to $54 billion. U.S. domestic program spending will decline 1-1/2 percent next year without program changes. The House and Senate budget resolutions recently passed call for an 11 percent to 14 percent reduction in farm supports. So, farmers could receive as little as $7.5 billion in farm support.

EU farm supports are rising while U.S. support declines.

As domestic export supports fall, the EU out-spends the U.S. by 6-to-1...

...meanwhile, U.S. farm spending is down over 70 percent, compared to EU spending, up by more than 200 percent.

we have included a chart which demonstrates just how lopsided The European Agriculture support spending is to ours, as are many other industrial nations.

I'd like to thank you for taking time to read Corn Talk and I'd also like to wish you a safe and productive harvest season.

POPULATION EFFECTS OF DIFFERENT CORN HYBRIDS

Greg Roth
Penn State Agronomy
Associate Professor

One of the major factors that has resulted in higher yields in corn has been the development of tolerance by modern hybrids to higher plant populations.

Since 1960, plant population recommendations have increased from an average of 15,000 plants per acre to 25,000 plants per acre or more. Consequently, we need to continue to be reevaluating the yield response to plant population.

A recent study was concluded at Ohio State by P. R. Thomison and D. M. Jordan on the effects of plant population on four corn hybrids that provides some insight into how modern hybrids respond to plant population. The results were published recently in the Journal of Production Agriculture.

These researchers conducted a total of 11 experiments at seven locations in 1990 and 1991. In each experiment, four hybrids were evaluated at 16,000, 24,000, and 32,000 plants per acre. The four hybrids were characterized as a single ear flex hybrid, a single eared fixed hybrid, a semiprolific hybrid, and a prolific hybrid. Prolific hybrids tend to produce more than one ear per stalk.

The terms "fixed" and "flex" refer to the response of ear size to population. A fixed ear does not increase in size with a reduced population whereas a flex ear hybrid increases in size as the population decreases.

Grain yields in this study were generally good with 1990 sites yielding slightly more than those in 1991. In 1990, yields ranged from 148 to 180 bushels/acre while in 1991 yields ranged from 124 to 174 bushels/acre.

In 1990, grain yield was highest at the 32,000 population at five of the six sites. In 1991, yields were highest for the 32,000 population at only one site and highest for the 24,000 population at three sites.

In general, the yield response to the high populations was not as great under stress but yields did not decline appreciably at the high population.

Hybrid differences in prolificacy and ear growth habit had a relatively small effect on the response to increasing population. In 1990, the single-eared and semi-prolific hybrids required a higher population (32,000) than the prolific hybrid to achieve maximum yields, but this did not occur in 1991 when all hybrids achieved the highest yields at 24,000. Consequently, the researchers were unable to show a difference in the yield response to population between the fixed and flex ear hybrids as might be expected.

Lodging was increased at the higher population and with the prolific and semiprolific hybrids. Increasing the population from 24,000 to 32,000 increased the lodging of the fixed and flex hybrids only about 1 to 2 percentage units averaged over all 11 sites. When populations were increased from 24,000 to 32,000, lodging was increased by more than 5 percent in only two of the eleven sites.

This study supports some of the plant population responses we have observed in Pennsylvania, such as: 1) higher populations (greater than 24000) will sometimes result in higher yields but often will not reduce yields, 2) yield responses to higher populations are most likely under low stress conditions, and 3) modern single-eared hybrids stand well even at high populations.

This study suggests there may be potential for increasing yields with populations higher than 24,000 on soils with reasonably good yield potential. On some of our droughty Pennsylvania soils with 100 bushel or less yield potential, increasing populations above 24,000 may not be appropriate.

Crops Conference Jan. 30

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — The Pennsylvania Crops Conference has been scheduled for Tuesday, Jan. 30, 1996 here at the Embers Inn and Convention Center.

This year's conference will include presentations from NCGA executive vice president Keith Heard from NCGA's Washington office describing the upcoming Farm Bill Legislation and the status of Full Farm Flexibility, a legislative initiative of NCGA.

Growers will also hear from growers and industry personnel who have had some of their first experiences with yield monitors this fall in the field.

Also on tap are presentations the use of options in grain marketing and the results of the Pennsylvania Five Acre Corn Club.

This year's conference will be cosponsored by the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) and the Pennsylvania Soybean Promotion Board.

PFGC breakout sessions will focus on making the transition to grazing and ways to reduce the labor associated with forage harvesting. The Pennsylvania Soybean Promotion Board has invited John Becherer, the CEO of the United Soybean Checkoff Board, who will discuss how the soybean checkoff funds are being used at the national level to develop new markets for soybeans.

If you are a serious grain or forage producer in Pennsylvania, you should mark your calendar and plan to attend this conference.

Registration information will be available soon at local extension offices or can be obtained from the Penn State Agronomy Department at (814) 865-2543.

Parabolic shanks lift and fracture the soil. 39" of underframe clearance assures trouble free operation even in heavy residue.

X-FOLD PULVERIZERS

The New Brillion Soil Commanders take Residue Management to the next generation of soil conservation efficiency.

The Soil Commanders are versatile tillage tools designed to meet the needs of the mid-size farmer who uses a 150-200 H.P. tractor. One of the keys to the machine's versatility is that it uses interchangeable shank legs and individually mounted disk assemblies instead of a disk gang. This makes possible a machine with disk assemblies on the front and rear of the frame with chisel plow or deep-ripper shanks on 15", 24", 27" or 30" spacings.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.)—The Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) is pleased to announce continuing support for its Membership Incentive Program (MIP) that the association is conducting in conjunction with a number of cooperating Pennsylvania seed companies.

The MIP with seed corn company sponsorship will entitle any corn grower who plants at least five acres of corn to a free bag of seed corn (standard size) with a three-year membership in PMCGA/NCGA.

This program applies to all three-year memberships, new or renewal. To participate, simply complete the membership form and indicate the brand of seed corn you would like to try.

Remember the theme of our program is "Try Something New," so we hope you will use this opportunity to experiment a bit and not just get a bag of free seed corn. You will receive a certificate for a free bag of seed from the company chosen from PMCGA.

You will make the ultimate decision about which hybrid to receive in consultation with the local seed corn dealer for the company you selected. PMCGA will send the names and addresses by brand chosen to the appropriate seed corn company's statewide contact person and they will contact you.

In addition to this incentive program, you'll be joining thousands of other growers across the country who are showing their support for the corn industry. Locally, you'll be supporting PMCGA's activities such as Corn Talk, our Corn Conference, and local corn promotion activities.

The PMCGA board of directors are very pleased with the support the seed industry in Pennsylvania has shown by supporting this initiative.

Tarheel State Works To Prepare Next Generation

MT. OLIVE, N.C.—North Carolina corn growers farm in part of the country where many crops will flourish.

In acreage, tobacco leads the state; corn comes in second.

Other "firsts" and "seconds" characterize the Tarheel State. North Carolina ranks second in hog production and first in turkeys. Overall in poultry, North Carolina ranks in the nation's top 10.

"We're as diverse as any state," said Keith Beavers, a member of the Corn Growers Association of North Carolina (CGANC). Near Mt. Olive, Beavers raises corn, tobacco, sweet potatoes, pickling cucumbers, coastal bermuda hay, wheat, soybeans, vegetables and cattle.

North Carolina's children are perhaps the commodity corn growers most want to raise well. CGANC invests a substantial share of its resources in "growing up" a generation of informed consumers.

Thanks to CGANC, many North Carolina fourth graders are learning about corn through the National Corn Growers Association's (NCGA) curriculum kit. Also, CGANC is developing new materials to answer the many individual questions children call and write into the association's office.

"We need to start early to teach children about agriculture," said CGANC staffer Joyce Woodhouse. "We want our kids to know how food gets to the grocery store and understand the important contribution farms make to our state's economy."

Year to year, in North Carolina, educating corn growers about the need to promote their crop is a continuing concern. Our state is corn deficient, observes Beavers. With a ready market, sometimes growers need to be encouraged to look beyond state borders toward the world market where prices are set.

With a number of programs under way, what would be on Beavers' "wish list" for next year?

•First, more market demand for ethanol. Beavers wants ethanol to play a strong role in the Clean Air Act. With that accomplished, Beavers anticipates CGANC's efforts to attract an in-state ethanol processor may bear fruit.

•Second, more field days to highlight CGANC's commitment to research, such as a major agricultural research field day, to be held in cooperation with the state extension service. Beavers would like to see this effort expanded. The CGANC's 24 farmer-directors determine which projects are funded by the state's one-half cent per bushel corn checkoff program. Research to help the corn farmer lower production costs and increase profitability ranks high as a goal.

•Third, more dollars invested in CGANC's classroom education program. Every fourth grader in every county should know where corn comes from, believes Beavers.

Area Corn Grower Wins National Contest

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—An area corn grower, Cheryl Maximuck of Doylestown, Pa., is a winner in the 1994 National Corn Yield Contest (NCYC), sponsored by the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA).

The local operation placed first in the state in the "No-Till Irrigated Class" with a yield of 209.7471 bushels per acre. The hybrid used in the winning field was DeKalb DK623.

The contest included 471 winners from throughout the nation's corn-growing areas. The average yield for all contest entrants was a record 192 bushels per acre, compared to the overall U.S. average of 138.6 bushels per acre. The contest average was up significantly from the 1993 contest average of 159 bushels per acre, reflecting more positive growing conditions in 1994. Six yields at more than 300 bushels per acre were produced.

Qualified supervisors were present at harvest to verify accuracy of the yield, which, according to contest rules, must be taken from a yield of at least 10 continuous acres planted to a single hybrid. More than 3,100 farmers entered the 1994 contest.

"The National Corn Yield Contest epitomizes the productivity of American farmers," according to NCGA president Rod Gangwish, a farmer from Shelton, Neb. "Farmers should be extremely proud of producing a record-breaking corn crop of more than 10 billion bushels this year. It demonstrated again that we are the most efficient corn producers in the world, with capabilities of supplying all of our current markets, expanding foreign markets, and developing new industrial uses."

Not only are contest entrants producing high yields, but they are doing it very efficiently, according to Gangwish. All entrants applied an average of only 0.94 pounds of commercial nitrogen per bushel of yield, while the agronomic requirement is 1.1 pound per bushel.

"This is one example that helps demonstrate that farmers are good stewards of the environment by using production inputs wisely and using carry-over nitrogen from their previous year's crop," said Gangwish. Almost 60 percent of entrants perform a soil test to help them make input decisions.

Contest winners were honored and awarded custom-designed trophies at NCGA's 1995 Corn Classic this year in Nashville, Tenn.

The "1995 Corn Yield Guide," which outlines the agronomic information of all 471 state and national NCYC winners, was featured in the March issue of Farm Journal magazine. The guide is published by NCGA and sponsored by American Cyanamid Company, Deere & Company, and Northrup King Company.

Entry forms and rules for the 1995 contest are available by contacting NCGA at 1000 Executive Parkway, #105, St. Louis, MO 63141, (314) 275-9915.

Area corn growers Cheryl and Mathew Maximuck of Doylestown were recognized recently as a state winner in the 1994 National Corn Yield Contest, sponsored by the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA). Daryl Reid, right, a farmer from Macomb, Ill., and chairman of the NCGA Field Services Committee, presented the award at the NCGA Corn Classic in Nashville.

RESEARCH UPDATE

CULTURAL PRACTICE EFFECTS ON STALK BREAKAGE OF CORN

Greg Roth
Penn State Agronomy
Associate Professor

sity of Nebraska, has documented some of the effects of cultural practices on greensnap in corn.

During early July in both 1993 and 1994, winds in excess of 70-90 miles per hour were experienced at the University of Nebraska South Central Research and Education Center, where Ferguson is located. During both years, the winds caused stalk breakage in studies on and adjacent to the research station.

Ferguson collected stalk breakage information from a long-term N study on the station and a site-specific N application trial located on a production field near the station.

The data from the long-term N study provided insight into the effects of fertilizer N rate, N application time, and tillage method on the severity of stalk breakage. Breakage increased from about 10 percent with no N to about 40 percent at the 268 pounds/acre N rate. Sidedressing N compared to applying all N at planting reduced stalk breakage from about 50 percent to 15 percent in 1993 and from about 40 percent to 30 percent in 1994. Stalk breakage was also about 7-10 percentage units greater due to conventional tillage compared to no-till, which the researchers attributed to the slower early season growth in no-till.

In general, any factors that accelerated crop growth early in the season also increased the susceptibility of the crop to stalk N breakage.

The site specific study showed that there was a significant relationship between the soil organic matter level and stalk breakage. Areas of the field that had higher organic matter levels also had higher stalk breakage levels.

Often we prefer practices that encourage early season growth with the objective of attaining higher yields. Early season growth, however, is not always a good indication of yield potential as this study illustrates. Our experience in Pennsylvania shows that some fields, planted to hybrids with slow early season growth or those experiencing early season herbicide injury, are often not at a yield disadvantage compared to faster growing fields.

We have also measured this where excessive N rates are used in our studies; the corn grows faster early in the spring and is a darker shade of green but often yields less in the end. Consequently, adjusting some cultural practices to avoid excessive early season growth could be a help if stalk breakage continues to be a problem on specific farms in our area.

TOO LATE TO CONTROL PERENNIALS THIS FALL?

Bill Curran
Penn State
Weed Specialist

Fall is generally the best time to kill most of our "herbaceous" perennials such as Canada thistle, quackgrass, and hemp dogbane.

It is also the best time to kill an old legume or grass hay field or pasture. However, by this time (mid-October), you may be asking whether that application is still worthwhile.

Except for some of the more cool-season types of perennials, the benefit of applying a herbicide after the first hard frost is questionable. If in doubt, examine the plant for signs of life.

For example, with hemp dogbane, if the leaves still appear mostly green and healthy and the root buds are pink, an application of Roundup, 2,4-D, or Banvel could still pay off.

For the last two seasons, we compared two application times (Sept. 1 and Oct. 1) for several herbicides including Roundup on hemp dogbane control in the fall. Although the early September timing was slightly better than early October (80 percent vs. 70 percent control), both timings were more effective than spring or early summer application of systemic herbicides in corn.

With the cooler season species (Canada thistle, quackgrass, orchardgrass, etc.) we generally have more time to make that application. However, the effectiveness generally starts to decrease after mid-September, depending on location.

In a study conducted by Dr. Nathan Hartwig, professor of weed science, the later fall applications of Roundup on quackgrass control were less effective than earlier timings (Table 1). As a general rule for cool season species, make applications before September 30 in northern and western Pennsylvania, before October 15 in central Pennsylvania, and before November 1 in southern Pennsylvania.

For our more "fair-weather" types of perennials such as hemp dogbane, bindweed, and wirestem muhly, move these dates up by about 1 month.

The application rate for Roundup is 1 to 2 quarts per acre (3 to 6 pints per acre for Ranger). The lower rates of Roundup require low volume application (3 to 10 gallons of

Table 1. The following table is from some research conducted in Central Pennsylvania in the 1970s. The effect of application timing on quackgrass control is readily apparent. Roundup was applied at 1 1/3 quarts per acre.

Time of Application	Percent Quackgrass Control
Late September	>90%
Early October	80-90%
November	50-60%

carrier per acre plus surfactant and ammonium sulfate). Fall applications of Banvel, 2,4-D, Banvel +2,4-D, or in combination with Roundup are also more effective than spring treatments on killing old alfalfa sods or most other perennial broadleaf species. In addition, fall applications of Banvel allow for spring soybean or forage legume plantings, while spring treatments do not.

The addition of Roundup or Ranger to 2,4-D and/or Banvel can broaden the spectrum and is necessary for grass control. Banvel and/or 2,4-D LVE rates are generally 1 to 2 pints per acre.

Guard Against Corn Harvesting Accidents

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A number of Pennsylvania farmers lose fingers, hands, arms, and even feet in corn harvesting equipment each year. Some lose their lives. Nearly all of the accidents are preventable, but risk-taking, carelessness, or lack of knowledge allow them to happen. Such tragedies can be prevented, however, especially if farm workers understand the hazards these machines present and practice the safety precautions needed to avoid them.

Most serious corn harvesting accidents involve either corn pickers or corn combines. Because these machines perform similar tasks, the dangers that are related to their operation are similar, too. Burns, severe cuts, entrapment, and amputations are hazards of both.

Cornpickers are usually involved in most severe corn harvesting accidents, mainly because of their easily clogged gathering mechanisms. Characteristically, cornpicking accidents occur when the snapping rolls become plugged and the operator tries to remove debris or cornstalks while the machine is still running. As he tugs at a plugged stalk or weed, the snapping rolls suddenly free up and begin to roll, yanking stalks or weeds forward at nearly ten feet per second. Before the operator can release his grip, his hand and arm have travelled about three and a half feet and into the machine. To make matters worse, once he is entangled in the machine it is often a very difficult and time consuming task to get him out. Fortunately, avoiding accidents like this is easy. Simply turn off the power to your cornpicker before servicing it in any way!

The gathering mechanisms on corn combines do not become plugged as easily as those on cornpickers. Nevertheless, corn combine operators also run the risk of losing hands, arms, or feet if they try to unplug the rolls without first turning the machine off. Most combine injuries occur when clothing, fingers, hands or legs are caught in the many exposed belts and gears. These accidents usually result in burns and severe cuts although amputations also occur. As with the cornpicker, shut your combine completely off to avoid injury whenever you leave the operator's platform to make adjustments. If some tasks must be carried out with the machine running, wear clothing that is comfortable but close-fitting. Be especially careful to avoid wearing flappy coveralls, and loose sleeves and cuffs.

Because of their size, it is dangerous to use corn harvesting equipment, particularly combines, near ditches or streams. The banks along these channels can give way under the picker or combine and upset it. As a rule, to prevent accidents of this nature, keep the center of gravity of your machine as far from the edge of a channel as the channel is deep. For instance, if the bank rises six feet from a ditch, keep at least six feet between the bank's edge and the center of your machine.

Another factor that affects safety during corn harvest is the weather. During the rain and cold of late fall corn is frequently wet or icy. Wet or icy corn is more likely to clog the feeding mechanisms of both pickers and combines. It is also more likely to fall over, adding to the problem of muddy and slick field conditions, which make it difficult to stay on the corn rows. If you must harvest crops under these conditions, slow your groundspeed and take in less corn than you normally would. If you harvest corn early in the season, beware of hot and dry conditions.

Dry corn can catch fire and burn rapidly, endangering not only you and your equipment, but your crops as well. Be alert for overheated bearings or belts and remove accumulations of chaff and stalks from near the manifold. For added safety and the ability to act quickly in an emergency, your harvesting machinery should be equipped with a fire extinguisher at all times.

Harvesting corn is a demanding task requiring constant alertness on the part of the machine operator. Due to poorly operating equipment and/or long working hours, farmers frequently become fatigued and then cannot maintain the level of awareness that is required to safely complete their task. This problem can be avoided, however, through careful planning before harvest. For example, "downtime" can be reduced in most cases by inspecting and repairing corn harvesting equipment before harvest day arrives. And although long hours in the field are often necessary, working time can be structured in a way that will allow you to rest periodically. This can be done by setting up shifts and changing off once or twice a day if you are able to share the work with someone else, or by shutting off the machine and taking a break every couple of hours when working alone.

On corn harvesting equipment, as with all other farm vehicles, carrying extra riders is a serious hazard. Unnecessary riders not only run the risk of falling under the machinery or getting caught in exposed belts or gears, they also distract the driver and can affect his driving performance. When operating corn combines make sure no one enters the grain tank or stands near the stalk chopper when the machine is running. Occasionally children may be drawn by curiosity or a sense of adventure to the corn field where the harvesting is taking place. Therefore, always be on the lookout for children in the field ahead. The best way to prevent second party accidents, though, is to keep all individuals not involved in the harvest, especially children, far away from the corn harvesting operation.

A safe, efficient corn harvest in autumn depends a great deal upon how well you prepare for accidents. Be aware of the hazards the weather, fatigue, second parties, and embankments pose. Most of all, remember that the key factor in most corn harvesting accidents is the failure of the operator to stop the power before unclogging or servicing his equipment. Whenever you need to leave your equipment to service it, do one very important thing before you do anything else: TURN IT OFF!

ALTERNATIVE DESIGNS FOR HYBRID STRIP TESTS

Gregory W. Roth
Associate Professor
Agronomy
Penn State

Hybrid strip trials are usually conducted in one of two designs. One is a non replicated strip with individual hybrids laid out in adjacent strips. Another method is a tester design that involves a tester hybrid to be placed between every second or third hybrid in the trial. In this design, hybrid yields are adjusted based on the yields of the adjacent tester strips. Comparisons between hybrids are then made on the basis of adjusted yields. The purpose of this procedure is to adjust for variation that might be encountered across the field.

A recent article published in the July 1992 issue of the Journal of Production Agriculture by M. A. Schmitt of the University of Minnesota and S.J. Openshaw and M. W. Davis of Pioneer Hi-bred International examined the relative benefits of the two designs. In the study, 19 large plot yield trials were conducted in Minnesota using five hybrids each. The authors used statistical techniques to estimate the variation encountered with each design.

The authors found that in 14 of 19 trials, the use of the tester system actually increased the variation encountered in the test. In most cases, the adjustment using the testers did not increase the precision of the test. As a result, the use of testers to increase the confidence of performance data is usually unwarranted. The authors suggest that to increase the precision of on-farm testing, instead of going to a tester system, a second replication should be considered. Replication could reduce the variation by one half and could be accomplished with little extra work compared to the tester system.

The failure of the tester system to adjust yields may be due to several reasons. First, the variations in fields are not always consistent in one direction. This is obvious to anyone who has flown over Pennsylvania farmland. Secondly, hybrids may not react the same way to gradients in productivity. We know that some hybrids are more sensitive to drought stress, for example, than others. And finally, the tester system spreads the test out over more land and there is a greater chance to encounter more variation.

This study shows that we should reconsider how we design hybrid strip trials. Some good basic rules to follow on designing strip trials include: 1) keep the number of entries as low as possible, 2) replicate if possible, 3) limit the test to hybrids of a similar maturity (or group the hybrids by maturity in the test) and 4) don't rely only on the results of a single trial.

Pennsylvania
Five-Acre
Corn Club

Sponsored by:

Pa. Master Corn Growers Assn.
Penn State Coop. Extension
Commercial Seed Industry

What is the objective of the Five Acre Corn Club?

The Pennsylvania Five Acre Corn Club is a program designed to bring together corn growers, seed dealers, and extension agents who strive to achieve more profitable corn production in Pennsylvania.

How is this accomplished?

Producers enroll in the program through their county extension office before July 1. Before corn harvest, they complete a survey of their production practices and a farm management exercise. In 1995, this management exercise will focus on estimating operating and ownership costs for corn planters.

At harvest, an extension agent or an approved supervisor will assist them in performing a yield check and collect the survey information. Producers will receive a summary of yield and management information from all participants after the data is summarized. Top producers will be recognized at the Pennsylvania Crops Conference.

What are some of the key rules in the Club?

1. One entry per farm or field. An entry fee of $10 is due at sign-up. (Checks should be made payable to Penn State University—Corn Club). A farm operation consists of one or more farms, managed by one or more farm operators. A farm operator, who is 18 or more years of age by August 1, 1995, is eligible to enter the Pennsylvania Five-Acre Corn Club. Final report forms should be received at the Agronomy Department Office, 116 ASI Building, by December 1.
2. Size of field. Not less than five acres of one hybrid or variety at one location on the farm. If corn is grown in contour strips, two or more strips may be entered, all strips entered must be sampled at harvest time. Total corn acreage in contour strips must total not less than five acres.
3. Hybrid or variety. The hybrid or variety must be commercially available.
4. Fields cannot have received any irrigation.
5. Harvesting instructions for yield determinations are outlined on the report form. Harvesting locations must be selected by the official or officials checking yields. Class 3 requires harvesting and weighing a minimum of 3 acres and all harvesting must include the entire length of the field. The harvesting methodology utilized by National Corn Growers Association Corn Yield Contest which involves harvesting one pass, skipping three passes, harvesting another pass for a total of 1.25 acres can be substituted for the three acre harvest size if desired. The enrollee must be prepared to have the field opened to facilitate machine sampling.
6. Enrollee must furnish all labor to harvest, weigh, and prepare samples for determining moisture content. These operations must be done in the presence of the official or officials certifying the yields.

7. Samples for determining moisture content are to be placed in moisture proof bags at time of harvest. The moisture percent must be determined within 24 hours on one designated moisture tester for the county.

8. Awards will be made for the three highest yields in the Shelled Grain Harvest Classes and in the Ear Corn Harvest Classes. A minimum of five entries is required to establish a class with awards. Only one class can be entered per farm, or farms, under one management. Eligibility for the three year average class is based on the current year's results plus the two previous year's results. All three year results must have been in the same harvest class. A Champion will be named for each class based on grain yield per acre. A club member may receive only one award in a given year. A three year average champion is not eligible to receive a first, second or third place award in the current year, and may not compete for another three year average trophy for three years. If a person places in both three year and current year classes, the award will be made in the three year class.

For more information on rules or the Corn Club, check with your extension office or contact Greg Roth at the Penn State Department of Agronomy at 814-863-1018.

Corn Club Benefits:

- an accurate yield estimate
- learn a useful farm management technique
- a summary of management practices of other corn growers
- the ability to compete for one of over 21 awards presented annually.

What have we learned in the past from the club?

- Many growers are using less than 1 pound of N fertilizer per bushel of corn harvested.
- 40-60% of the participants sidedress N.
- The average plant population at harvest on farms in the club is about 24,000.
- High yields can be produced on less productive soils, provided rainfall is timely.
- About 20-25% of corn club fields are cultivated.
- P and K are frequently applied well above crop removal rates.

Five-Acre Corn Club?

Call your county extension office to check if your county is participating in the corn club. Check the rules on the brochure to see if you and your field are eligible to participate. If so, complete the entry form and send along with the registration fee of $10 to the county office. You will receive the appropriate forms to complete in August. Finally, make arrangements with your extension office for the yield check at harvest.

The planter you can grow with...

The new KINZE Series II Planters introduce an exciting, innovative modular design concept that offers you total flexibility in planting options plus the most efficient precision placement planting technology.

Think of the possibilities!

With KINZE's Single Frame Planter you can plant 30" corn and minutes later convert to 15", even 10" row spacing for beans or for small grains.

Or set it up with liquid or dry fertilizer options instead of push units and save the extra trips and expense of other fertilizer application systems.

Or you can add the front-mounted Double Frame attachment and do it all—standard rows, fertilizer and split rows. All with the same planter, same drive components, same drive system. Without sacrificing one ounce of that quality KINZE construction.

The new KINZE Series II Precision Placement Planters. More planting options. More fertilizer options. More spacing options. A smoother, more dependable drive system. Like no other planter in the field today!

KINZE ROW UNITS

You start with a simple, dependable row unit design with easy adjustments that give you exact depth control, and the most ideal seed-to-soil contact possible. At KINZE we call it "Precision Placement." Simply put, it's the toughest most dependable system in the field today.

How does it work? At the exact point of seed placement, 15" double disc openers and dual gauge wheels combine to mold a clean, consistent V-formed seed trench at a pre-set depth. Trailing V-closing wheels then securely press the seed trench walls on each side of the seed for positive seed-to-soil contact, virtually eliminating air pockets and leaving a loose "hill" of soil on top of the seed. It's the ideal environment for the emerging seedling.

Each row unit is independently adjustable for depth and down pressure. Spring-loaded parallel arms give you all the flexibility you need. Down pressure? Your choice. Standard, quick-adjustable dual springs for conventional planting, or quad springs (shown right) for conservation tillage. Each with four positions so you can set the unit's down force for your conditions.

IPM RESEARCH ON FIELD CORN PROVIDES ANSWERS

Carrie Koplinka-Loehr
New York State
Integrated Pest Management Program, Cornell

New York's field corn has been valued at $350 million in recent years, so learning sound ways to protect this crop from pests is a high priority. Researchers at Cornell University are working with funding from the New York State Integrated Pest Management Program to fine-tune ways for farmers to keep production high and environmental risks low.

Predicting Western Corn Rootworm Injury. Many growers continue to be concerned about western and northern corn rootworm. Corn rootworm larvae, which feed on the roots of field corn, can weaken the plants to such a degree that they topple over. Scouts currently gauge the risk of rootworm injury by counting the adult beetles on corn plants. If the action threshold is reached, the following year the field might be planted to a different crop, or an insecticide is applied. Recent studies suggest that the threshold is right on target for silage corn, but needs refining for use with grain corn. Because unnecessary soil insecticide use can cost producers $14 to $16 per acre and increase the risk of ground and surface water contamination, improvements to pest assessment methods are needed.

In 1994, IPM researchers evaluated the effectiveness of three methods. They tied yellow sticky cards to corn stalks so they could check for adults, counted live adults on the plants, and made egg traps. These traps were plastic containers of clay "kitty litter" that were buried in the ground, camouflaged with a corn leaf, and later examined for any eggs that females would have laid in this "soil." Through this research, more accurate economic injury levels will be established. For example, similar research suggests that if 100 rootworm eggs per row foot are found in silage corn, or 300 eggs per row foot are found in grain corn, farmers might decide to treat or rotate the field out of corn the following year. In a related project on silage corn, researchers determined that manure applications of 20 to 40 tons per acre increased plant height and the crop's tolerance to rootworm.

Velvetleaf Threat Depends on Weather. Velvetleaf, a prolific weed with velvety, heart-shaped leaves, is not easily controlled by the preplant herbicides applied to fields. Farmers might ignore low populations of velvetleaf if they could be assured that their corn yields would remain high. For four years, crop scientists have been determining what economic threshold, if any, exists for this weed so that farmers can decide about additional control measures. This painstaking research involves hand-weeding of plots to allow a specified number of velvetleaf plants to grow, then taking "canopy measurements" from a view of 4 feet above the ground to determine what portion of a square meter is covered by the weed leaves or by corn leaves. At the conclusion of the 1994 field season, researchers confirmed that when velvetleaf is in competition with corn (dry years), yields can be reduced by 48 percent because plants are moisture-deprived. In wet years, corn plants will be able to tolerate substantial competition from velvetleaf. Two obstacles to implementation of weed thresholds are the accuracy of long-term weather predictions and future implications for weed seed production.

Rotating Corn with Soybeans Shows Benefits. This past year entomologists, pathologists, and soil and crop scientists began a second phase of a project to determine the best cultural practices for grain corn. They concluded that in rotated corn, chemical inputs can be greatly reduced or eliminated. In the past, the researchers demonstrated that planting a non-corn crop for one year can control corn rootworm and eyespot disease, and increase yields. They also showed that corn and soybeans can be grown with less herbicide by applying the chemical in a band and cultivating once. In that demonstration, weed control was adequate, and yields were the same as crops managed traditionally. Two rotation plans were studied: continuous corn, and corn rotated with soybeans (which is useful as a cash crop and has had few pest problems in recent trials). These schemes were combined with two tillage systems, moldboard plow and conservation tillage. Conservation tillage systems keep topsoil and residues in place. For example, the chisel plow, which shatters the soil, turns over less soil than the traditional moldboard plow. Although the chisel plow is currently used on 30 percent of the state's corn acreage, use is likely to increase.

Research on production and pest management with this implement has just begun in New York. The final variable in the research was the pest management system. Researchers tested three approaches: cultural (rotary hoe plus cultivation), chemical (insecticide and broadcast herbicide), and reduced-chemical (banded herbicide) plus cultural. The 1994 data suggest that in nonrotated corn, reducing chemical inputs may be difficult.

Full Farm Flexibility Is Program Option

WASHINGTON, D.C.—When the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) conceived the idea of Full Farm Flexibility, members agreed it was a great idea. But they knew it would be a tough sell in Washington.

Full Farm Flexibility is different from the status quo. It actually calls for change in current farm programs. And that is the first obstacle to any program that sets out to revamp an institution. NCGA's idea is simple. Give farmers the opportunity to farm for the market.

Unfortunately, that's not how current farm programs are organized. The bottom line with the 1990 farm bill is limited one-way flexibility for program crop participants. Producers may plant selected crops other than the program crop on up to 25 percent of any participating crop acreage base without losing base.

The current message to farmers is this: Plant too much, and you're out; plant the wrong thing, and you're out; plant it at the wrong time, and you're out. Three strikes can be pretty painful to a farmer who's just trying to make a living.

Full Farm Flexibility would correct that situation. To accomplish Full Farm Flexibility, simply:

crop on their farm and still receive deficiency payments for the program crop.

•Calculate payment acres by taking 75 percent of enrolled base acres. In effect, 25 percent of base acres would be unpaid and would not receive a deficiency payment.

•Maintain current levels of target prices and establish the loan rate at current levels or higher.

•The Acreage Reduction Program, 0-85/92 and Normal Flex Acres are no longer applicable.

In the comprehensive report, NCGA has compared Full Farm Flexibility, as outline above, with baseline and a 25 percent normal flex acre option, which is an extension of current limited one-way flexibility. As the study found, not only does Full Farm Flexibility afford farmers and consumers opportunity, it also saves money. Commodity Credit Corporation outlays for three major commodities—corn, wheat and cotton—would fall by $4 billion over the next five years, as compared to baseline. That's less money from the taxpayers. Market prices would rise enough so that farmers would not be hurt economically.

Another finding: Full Farm Flexibility does not lead to huge production shifts that some may have predicted. In fact, this study shows that 25 percent flex would provide enough flexibility in the aggregate, but it may not address the needs of individual farmers trying to make the best decisions for their operations.

CORN TALK NEWS

Full Farm Flexibility affords a host of advantages such as increased the crop rotations that will reduce chemical application rates, conserve soil, and provide more habitat for wildlife.

The NCGA will be the first to admit that there is no magical complete solution. Nothing, including Full Farm Flexibility, will answer all of the questions or solve all of the problems facing U.S. agriculture today. Full Farm Flexibility is about as close to a solution as you will come.

Full Farm Flexibility represents the evolution of power. Farmers—not Washington—have the opportunity to decide what works best for their farms, whether it relates to the market, the environment, agronomics, conservation, or management considerations.

Farmers need the ability to make these decisions. They can have that with Full Farm Flexibility.

— David Bomberger

David Bomberger, a dairy farmer in Lebanon, PA, installed a hammer mill from Automatic Farm System last winter. Already he sees a big difference from the roller mill he had before.

"This mill does a much better job of cutting the corn -- now we can get it fine enough. We're feeding the same amount of corn, but the cows are utilizing it better. You see less grain in the manure. And I really feel it's helped production."

Give us a call to learn how an AFS hammer mill will work on your dairy operation, with low initial cost and low maintenance.

THE KING AND ME™

New N4640 Want extremely high, stable yields of dry grain? This new corn hybrid is like having a solar-fueled dryer. Superior stalk strength and ear retention, plus very good staygreen, make N4640 a good choice for field drying. Heavy test weight grain dries down very fast. Outstanding drought tolerance, too. For top yields of field dry grain, ask us about new N4640 hybrid corn.

N7448 When growing gets rough, you need corn you can count on. Like N7448. Superior staygreen, standability and drought tolerance —plus a good foliar disease package — help this hybrid cut through tough growing conditions like a sicklebar in grass. It's well-suited for both no-till and continuous corn production. For yields you can rely on, plant N7448 hybrid corn.

New N7590 Like a new combine, new N7590 can help you harvest more of what you plant corn for. Its exceptionally high, stable yield potential is backed by superior drought tolerance. Heavy test weight grain dries down fast. Excellent early growth makes N7590 a strong choice for reduced tillage. To really fill your hopper, plan to harvest new N7590 hybrid corn.

Farm Bill Flexibility, Opportunities Top Agenda

SHELTON, Neb. — At the beginning of his year as National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) president, Rod Gangwish said, "This year, the NCGA will anticipate and accelerate change in Washington D.C. and state houses across the nation. We will work in partnership with those within and outside agriculture who share our common goals."

As the volunteer, elected leader of nearly 30,000 corn growers, Gangwish, a farmer in Shelton, Neb., had a big responsibility, but one he says he shared with all NCGA members.

"The most important person in this association is the member at the grassroots level," he said. "I may do the speaking on behalf of NCGA, but I'm backed by a strong group of officers and a board of directors who are supported by states and grassroots members."

Especially critical during Gangwish's year as president was the development of the 1995 farm bill. "There are many pieces of legislation that will affect the farm bill," said Gangwish. "If we don't take the opportunity to be involved in the issues that affect us, we forfeit the chance to have a voice in the outcome."

However, NCGA's efforts to innovate and lead encompassed far more than the farm bill. After only three weeks as president, Gangwish took to the podium to speak about the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) on behalf of the nation's corn farmers. Officials who organized a last minute news conference in Washington D.C. requested a farmer to represent agriculture interests, and chose Gangwish.

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

At a second GATT news conference, Gangwish was invited to speak on behalf of agriculture, where he introduced the participating senators and congressmen. The news conference was broadcast across the country on major news networks.

"This is just one example of a situation I was in where NCGA was sought for its reputation of trustworthiness," Gangwish said.

Among Gangwish's most memorable moments as NCGA president were testifying at farm bill hearings in the U.S. Senate and House, and representing corn farmers at the North American European Union Agricultural Conference, a meeting of European farmers, international ag counselors, and U.S. policy-makers.

During the coming year, fresh issues will top NCGA's agenda — most notably implementation of the 1995 farm bill and innovative ways to market corn. Gangwish acknowledges that at times, he will miss leading corn growers. But he said, "I'm leaving NCGA in good hands. As president, Bill Northey and the entire 1995-96 NCGA officer team will do a great job."

As for Gangwish, he'll continue to contribute to NCGA. After all, Gangwish appreciates the value of an NCGA member. He said, "We can't sit around and watch things happen, we need to participate and help shape our future."

Corn Stocks On-Farms Total 15 Million Bushels

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania's old corn crop stocks on September 1, 1995 totaled 17.1 million bushels, compared with 12.5 million bushels a year ago, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service.

Corn stocks on-farms totaled 15 million bushels, up from 10.5 million bushels last year. Off-farm stocks totaled 2.1 million bushels, compared with 2 million bushels a year ago.

Off-farm wheat stocks were estimated at 9.2 million bushels, 7 percent more than last year's 8.6 million bushels.

Off-farm barley stocks were estimated at 1,100,000 bushels on September 1, 1995, unchanged from last year. Off-farm soybean stocks totaled 410,000 bushels on September 1, 1995, compared with 260,000 bushels last year.

For wheat, soybeans and barley, on-farm stocks are included in a national unallocated total. Oat stocks on September 1, 1995, amounted to 6.7 million bushels, 5.6 million on-farm and 1.1 million off-farm. Last year, oat stocks were estimated at 6.4 million bushels, 5.7 million on-farm and 700,000 off-farm.

Nationally, old crop corn stored in all positions on September 1, 1995, is estimated at 1.56 billion bushels, up 83 percent from September 1, 1994. Of the total stocks, 741 million bushels are stored on-farms, 87 percent above last year. Off-farm stocks, at 817 million bushels, are up 80 percent from a year earlier.

All wheat stocks in all positions totaled 1.88 billion bushels, 9 percent less than stocks on hand September 1, 1994. Wheat stored on-farms totaled 744 million bushels, down 14 percent from last September. Off-farm stocks total 1.14 billion bushels, down 6 percent.

Barley stocks in all positions were 312 million bushels, compared with 352 million bushels on September 1, 1994. Of the total barley stocks on hand, 199 million bushels were stored on-farms and 113 million bushels were stored off-farms.

Old crop soybeans stored in all positions totaled 335 million bushels on September 1, 1995, 60 percent more than the 209 million bushels held a year ago. On-farm stocks, at 105 million bushels, are 73 percent more than last year. Off-farm holdings totaled 230 million bushels, 53 percent more than September 1, 1994.

Oat stocks in all positions totaled 180 million bushels, down 18 percent from a year ago. Of the total stocks, 107 million bushels are stored on-farms. Off-farm stocks totaled 72.9 million bushels.

MAXIMUM FEED QUALITY

To ensure maximum feed quality from corn it is vital to crack every kernel. Digestion of uncracked corn falls as the corn becomes drier. Independent trials have shown the Claas corn cracker to be close to 100% effective. From the cylinder the corn passes through the two large diameter rollers with saw tooth profiles. The rollers run at different speeds to intensify the grinding effect and open up each kernel. It is a fairly tough process so the latest generation of corn crackers take account of the wear involved on the rollers. Nothing can reduce the wear but Claas have cut the cost of repair by making the outer sleeve replaceable. The shaft, drive pulley and bearings can all be reused which cuts down repair bills dramatically. Adjusting the distance between the two rollers is accomplished by turning two handles, easily accessible behind the cab. In no time at all the degree of cracking can be matched to the ripeness of the crop.

RELIABILITY

The CLAAS Cutterbox is a unique balanced design using 2 knives in a V configuration. This forces the cutting action toward the center instead of the outside. This is the secret of their horsepower requirement and good quality of cut.

Corn Growers Break Into New Market

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—The nation's corn farmers broke ground in more ways than one in St. Louis, Mo. About 40 National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) members gathered in August for the groundbreaking ceremony of the first major metropolitan public E-85 (85 percent ethanol) refueling station in the U.S.

This is the first of 40 stations earmarked for the beginning of an E-85 refueling network throughout the Midwest.

NGCA and its state affiliates have long-supported the increased use of ethanol fuels such as E-85 through farmer-invested corn checkoff dollars.

E-85—a cleaner-burning, higher octane version of ethanol—generates tremendous environmental stewardship, said Phil Lampert, NCGA E-85 project coordinator. A 1996 Ford Taurus built to accommodate the fuel already meets Environmental Protection Agency air quality mandates for the year 2004. General Motors plans to utilize the same technology in its S-10 line of pickups beginning in 1997.

Lampert cites a number of benefits to using E-85 fuels. According to studies, drivers can expect increased mileage. Cars fueled with ethanol average five to ten percent higher mileage per gallon than gasoline-powered cars. E-85 Chevy Lumina have been averaging 18-20 miles per gallon.

Although the E-85 fuel sold at this first station will be slightly more expensive than regular gasoline—approximately 10 cents per gallon—Lampert said it will be very competitive in reformulated gasoline markets.

"E-85 vehicles have the lowest emissions of all petroleum-derived fuel alternatives," said Ryland Utlaug, chairman of NCGA's Market

Development Committee. "When combining emissions, performance, mileage, price and cost for the delivery system, E-85 is the best alternative fuel available."

"This is really a flexible form of fuel," Lampert said. "There will be no switches, nothing to throw. The driver will have no knowledge other than a gauge that incites what percentage of alcohol is in the tank. The beauty of it is it's going to increase profitability for corn growers, we're going to be able to produce it domestically, and we're going to be able to promote energy independence."

By 2010, E-85 fuels could increase demand of corn by 500,000 bushels, Lampert said. Every 100 million bushels of corn ground for ethanol increases the price of corn by five cents per bushel.

That is definitely something Rod Gangwish, NCGA president and a farmer from Shelton, Neb., can appreciate. Although percentage-wise E-85 is not a large market, it is a new market. And the more corn processed, the more dollars in the pockets of growers across the country.

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

"We've got a new product with a new pump, a new supply and a new car. Who knows what could happen," Gangwish said. "We have a commitment from government to use cars, from private industry to supply fuels and from farmers to grow and promote. We have plenty backing this up."

Corn Stover — Feed For Cattle?

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Farmers short on forage or cash may want to consider feeding corn stover (fodder minus the ears) as part of the forage ration for their cattle, especially young stock and dry cows.

It is comparable in energy content to average hay on a dry matter basis.

The biggest drawback in feeding corn stover is its physical nature.

Ensiling while it is still green or mixing dry material with higher moisture hay-crop forage after killing frosts may make it more acceptable to cattle. It also may be baled, particularly as large packaged bales, for self-feeding.

Liquid anhydrous ammonia may be applied to increase its protein equivalent content and help in preservation. Usually 20-35 pounds of liquid anhydrous ammonia may be applied per ton of dry stover via bale injectors or equipment on the baler.

This should increase the protein content of stover to about 10-14 percent on a dry matter basis.

Because stover is relatively devoid of vitamins A and E, it is recommended that the amounts fed be limited to about 20 percent of the normal forage dry matter fed to milk cows.

Stover may provide up to 1/3 of the forage dry matter for dry cows or bred heifers until 2 to 4 weeks prior to expected calving. Then limit it to 20 percent or less.

This means a large breed cow may be fed about 5 to 6 pounds of stover dry matter while a 700-pound heifer might get 3 to 5 pounds daily.

The key to its use is to include it in a well-balanced ration with proper amounts of protein, minerals, and vitamins.

Late Harvesting Could Cause Grain Bin Trouble

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Be careful when entering grain bins this fall. A trip into the bin to dislodge some spoiled grain caked against the walls could be the last thing you ever do.

Each year, between 25 and 35 people become victims of grain drowning, a slow suffocation that occurs when a person is trapped and buried in grain. But this fall, there is an even greater risk of the accidents occurring, said an Ohio State University Extension associate safety specialist.

"The wet year and late planting produces a higher risk of grain drowning in grain bins," Tim Lawrence said. "Harvesting high moisture corn, anything greater than 14 percent, increases the chance of grain bridges or caking of grain along the sides of bins."

Grain bridges occur when several inches to a foot of the top layer of grain spoils and solidifies, producing a crust, or bridge, on top of the grain. The danger occurs when grain is removed from under the crusted layer, and the bridge remains intact. Farm workers checking a bin they think should be almost empty, but instead looks full, may walk on the bridge to see what's happening. The bridge breaks and the worker is trapped in grain.

Workers also can become trapped when trying to break loose spoiled grain that is caked along bin walls. If a worker tries to break up the caked material by picking at the bottom of the mound, large sections of grain could break off the top and cover the worker instantly.

However, it is important to remember that grain drownings can occur even in bins where no bridging or caking has occurred. Loose grain acts like quicksand. It doesn't take long for someone to become trapped, Lawrence warns.

"If you get trapped in grain over your knees, you're not going to get out by yourself," Lawrence said. "And too often this occurs with the bin's auger still running."

Once trapped in flowing grain, victims are rapidly drawn to the bottom of the bin where they can become entangled in the unloading auger. A person can be completely submerged in grain in less than eight seconds, and even faster with larger unloading equipment.

"During harvest time is a good chance to warn farmers of this danger," Lawrence said. "They need to realize that in situations with high moisture corn, added precautions need to be taken to avoid drowning in grain."

To reduce the risk of grain drowning, Ohio State University Extension offers the following guidelines:

- A person entering a grain bin should be fastened to a safety rope or harness that is tied to a point outside the structure. Two additional people should be involved — one who can see the person inside the bin and another on the ground who can assist in lifting the inside worker to safety, quickly go for aid and ensure that no one starts the unloading equipment.

- Never enter a bin of flowing grain. If you drop a grain probe or shovel, first stop the flow of grain and take the precautions given above, then retrieve the lost item. Remember, no piece of equipment is worth a human life.

- Don't enter a bin without knowing if it has a history of grain spoilage. This is especially true if the surface appears crusty; that is an indication that the grain has bridged. Always be cautious before walking on any surface crust.

- If you believe you must enter a bin alone and the bin has unloading equipment, you should lock the control circuit, tell someone what you are doing and post a sign on the control switch informing other workers that you are in the bin. Likewise, check each bin before you begin to unload to be sure that no one is inside.

- Be careful in any rescue attempt to avoid being pulled into the flowing grain and becoming a second accident victim.

- Install ladders and ropes on the inside of bins.

In an emergency, farmers who did not take the above precautions and find themselves caught in an emptying grain bin should try to get to the wall of the bin, and then continue walking around the edges. The greatest danger is in the middle of the bin.

These safety precautions should be discussed with your family, employees or fellow workers in order to avoid the possibility of grain drownings.

Uses Of Grains, Other Resources For Beef Production

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)—Livestock, beef cattle particularly, are often accused of using grains and other resources that should be directly consumed by the human population.

Following are some points to consider in determining the efficiency of using these resources through the U. S. beef cattle industry.

- Raising beef is an efficient use of our natural resources. Only through ruminant (four stomach), grazing animals can we harvest food from most of the more than 800 million acres of range and pasture land in the U. S. At least 85 percent of these lands are too high, too rough, too dry, or too wet to grow cultivated crops. The availability of grazing cattle more than doubles the U. S. land area that can be used to produce plants for food purposes.

- Approximately 85 percent of the nutrients consumed by cattle come from non-grain sources — feedstuffs not edible by humans. These feedstuffs include grass, roughage, food-processing by-products and crop residue. The grain that cattle do eat is produced specifically to meet this need and would not be grown if the demand did not exist.

- Less than half of the dry matter produced by grain crops is edible by humans. Millions of tons of nutrients would be wasted — to say nothing of waste disposal problems — if it were not for the fact that livestock can make use of food processing by-products and crop residues like corn stalks.

- If grain were not fed to livestock, more grain would not necessarily be available to feed the hungry. The U. S. continues to produce more grain than can readily be sold. For most of the last three decades, U.S. grain surpluses have increased, even with an expanding animal agriculture. That is why acreage reduction has been part of the government grain programs. The increase in grain supplies has not helped alleviate world hunger. Relief programs and/or economic and infrastructure development in poor countries, providing the ability to produce or purchase and distribute more food, are needed to help solve hunger problems.

- Energy use is not an issue when it comes to cattle production. The beef industry consumes less than one half of one percent of total U.S. fossil fuel energy use.

- More than 80 percent of the total energy involved in food production, processing, and preparation is used after food leaves the farm. Because many plant-source foods require large amounts of energy in the processing phase, the overall energy efficiency of beef often is comparable, or even superior, to the energy efficiency of plant-source foods.

How we manage our resources is vitally important for our nation's future. The beef industry nationally and in 30 states (soon to include Pennsylvania) is increasing efficiency of resource use through programs such as Integrated Resource Management (IRM) which also considers improved animal health and well-being and product wholesomeness.

NAFTA, GATT: What Have They Accomplished?

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

MEXICO—Despite the Mexican government's disastrous attempt to devalue its currency, the U.S. exported enough corn thus far to meet the annual import quota set under the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA).

Corn exports to Mexico continued to climb after jumping nearly 25 percent in the first year of the trade agreement. Mexico continues to be one of the top five markets for U.S. corn.

"Even with the peso devaluation they've made the purchases," said National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) Chairman Pete Wenstrand. "This indicates good, long-term growing demand."

Wenstrand serves as the NCGA representative on the U.S. Feed Grains Council (USFGC). The Washington-based group, made up of farmers and agribusinesses, helps fund foreign export promotion programs.

"The major impact of NAFTA has been to settle down a very volatile market," said USFGC official Kent VanAmburg.

Mexico imported almost 3 billion metric tons, or nearly 117 billion bushels of U.S. corn this year. "That already exceeds the quota under NAFTA for corn exports to Mexico," VanAmburg said. The trade agreement set a quota for corn exports into Mexico. The quota increases each year until all barriers are eliminated by the year 2008.

In addition to the volatile currency situation to the south, the testy trade relationship to the north will challenge the NAFTA to live up to expectations.

The U.S. requested the very first dispute settlement under the NAFTA with Canada. The Canadians insist the new General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) allows a slower reduction of its agricultural trade barriers than the schedule they agreed to with the NAFTA.

"We think they are wrong," said Leonard Condon, a deputy to the assistant U.S. Trade Representative (USTR) for Agricultural Affairs. More than half of the U.S. corn crop is used to feed livestock. Canada claims it can limit imports of U.S. poultry, dairy and other products at a higher rate under the GATT than under the NAFTA.

Condon said settling the matter with Canada could take up to six months. "We think this is an important case to see if the dispute settlement process actually works," he said.

Members of NCGA worked with the Clinton administration and fought hard to win passage of NAFTA and the GATT in the U.S. Congress. Implementation of the GATT may be as long and arduous as its negotiation and approval by the administration and Congress.

"The agreement was only implemented for most countries on Jan. 1, including the U.S., and for others, not until July 1," said Condon's boss, Deputy USTR Suzy Early.

Already the USTR has initiated an investigation into how the European Union calculated its first reduction of agricultural trade barriers it agreed to in the GATT treaty.

Existing EU trade barriers must be converted to import tariffs and then ratcheted down over a period of time.

"There have been some problems in the way they've structured their tariffs," said Bob Spitzer of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Foreign Agricultural Service (USDA-FAS). "There is a question of whether or not they've priced us out of the market again."

But the EU must also reduce export subsidies used to undercut export competition from the U.S. and other countries. NCGA Chairman Pete Wenstrand thinks the world trading system would be in peril if there were no constraints on the Europeans. "The GATT improves the trade dispute settlement process," he said. "Even though everyone wants more open trade, there still will be disagreements."

THERE'S AGWAY SEED PROGRAM.

THERE'S ONLY SEED PROGRAM.

Farms are like farmers. Every one is different. You all might share the same commitment to farming. But you sure don't share the same soil types, drainage conditions, nutrient quality and livestock nutrition needs.

That's why there is no prepackaged "Agway Seed Program." There's only the one seed program that matches up perfectly with the unique challenges of your operation.

Agway Crop Consultants look, listen and learn. Then they design a seed program that has your name on it, one that includes the single best combination of corn, alfalfa and forage varieties to balance your herd's ration at every stage of gestation and lactation.

Or, if you're in the cash grain business, one to produce bin-busting yields from every corn and soybean field.
